QUAKES KILL 15 ACROSS TURKEY

ANKARA (AP)—Fifteen persons were killed in earthquakes which shook widely separated regions of east and northeast Turkey early today, the state radio network reported.

The Central Meteorology Bureau said the quake appeared to have been centred in the province of Erzurum, about 150 miles southwest of the Russian border.

Tremors described as "mild to fairly sharp" also were felt in Siirt and Mus provinces and two Black Sea provinces to the north.

NOT GUILTY was the verdict Sunday by an all-male jury in the sensational Miami trial of blonde Candace Mossler and her nephew, Melvin Lane Powers, both charged in the 1964 slaying of Candace's millionaire husband, Jacques. Powers embraced Mrs. Mossler in the courtroom after the verdict was given. See story on Page 2.

WIRE BRIEFS

Flu Bug Hits Cariboo

QUESNEL (CP)—A flu epidemic which has plagued B.C.'s lower mainland for weeks, hit at the interior Cariboo area during the weekend. Health officials here said today there was a sharp increase of absenteeism at high and elementary schools. Quesnel High School reported an absenteeism rate of 25 per cent with a third of the teachers also absent after being hit by the flu bug.

No Decision Yet On Clay Fight

TORONTO (CP)—The proposed Cassius Clay-Ernie Terrell world heavyweight championship bout hung in abeyance today as Ontario government officials deliberated whether to sanction the March 29 fight.

No announcement is expected until Tuesday.

France Gives Informal Notice

PARIS (Reuters)—France has informally told its NATO allies it plans to withdraw French troops from Atlantic pact control in West Germany, diplomatic sources said today.

This is part of President de Gaulle's plan to disengage from integration with NATO in Europe.

Queen Home After Five-Week Tour

LONDON (AP)—Queen Elizabeth returned home today after a five-week tour of the Caribbean.

Prince Philip, who accompanied her on the tour, stayed in The Bahamas before starting an 11-day tour of the United States and Canada at Miami, Fla., Wednesday.

AFTER BOOK, CURIOUS THINGS BEGAN TO HAPPEN!

Detectives Hounding Auto Safety Critic

WASHINGTON — A few months after the publication of Ralph Nader's critical book on American automobiles, "Unsafe at Any Speed," detective agencies in Washington, Boston and New York began an investigation into his background and habits.

Did he have a normal sex-life? Was he anti-semitic? Did he belong to left-wing political groups? Was he a licensed driver? Was he professionally competent?

Other curious things began happening, according to an article by James Ridgeway in the current issue of The New Republic. Nader was bothered by pointless telephone calls on the eve of his testimony on auto safety before a congressional committee. People began following him.

An attractive brunette solicited his company at a casual meeting in a drug store on Feb. 20. Three days later, he was approached by a blonde in a supermarket who invited him to her apartment to move furniture around.

Investigators questioned his friends, his college professors, and a writer who had reviewed his book. They claimed Nader had applied for a job and they were checking him out. It was a plausible excuse but it was untrue. Nader was not job-hunting.

He was, instead, pursuing his interest in what is wrong with American cars — preparing his testimony for Congress and preparing for a meeting with auto-makers in Detroit.

Was it the auto-makers who had developed this unusual interest in Nader?

Neither Nader nor reporter Ridgeway could find out.

One investigating firm, Allied Investigative Service of Washington, refused to discuss the matter with Ridgeway initially and then denied it had any interest in Nader.

The Boston detective firm, Management Consultants, brushed off the reporter with: "I am not at liberty to discuss these matters."

The New York firm, Vincent Gillen Associates, of Garden City, admitted asking about Nader for a "client ... considering him for an important job, to do research or something."

Gillen told Ridgeway the investigation is incomplete and "all I can say, it is good for Nader."

Nader, however, does not feel good about it.

"They can't hurt me," he said, "asking about my sex life, my drinking habits and things like that. I'm not vulnerable. But it's a strange thing. Suppose I were married and had several children and someone turned up something embarrassing. It would be intimidation for a writer.

"I think it's wrong, if anyone disagrees with my book or what I've had to say, to turn it into something personal like this. Let them debate the issues, instead of this kind of thing."

Crisis Nears in House On Sex Scandal Charge

SPENCER:

'I Never Betrayed My Country'

OTTAWA (CP)—Victor Spencer appeared on a nation-wide television program Sunday night to deny ever spying for the Russians. But he admitted having made a "mistake."

2 WOMEN KILLED IN CRASH

NANAIMO (CP)—Two women are dead and a third in hospital following a car-truck collision a mile north of Qualicum today.

Dead are Mrs. Hilda Williams, 61, of Comox, and Mrs. Anne Coveney, about 60, of Courtenay.

In fairly good condition in hospital with undetermined injuries is Mrs. Kay Wilson, 26, of Courtenay.

RCMP said the crash occurred when the car containing the three women went out of control on the Island Highway and crashed head-on into a tanker truck.

Driver of the truck, John Digas of Nanaimo, was uninjured.

Spencer, subject of headlined House of Commons debate as an alleged spy fired from the postal service, refused to blame anyone for his situation.

The 62-year-old former postal clerk was interviewed in Vancouver by Jack Webster on the CBC program This Hour Has Seven Days.

He refused to say under direct questioning whether he had received $3,000 to $4,000 from Russian Embassy officials as stated in the Commons by Justice Minister Cardin.

But he added: "I never betrayed my country."

He admitted being guilty "of being friendly" to Russia, being a member of the Canada-Soviet Friendship Society, and having the desire to travel to Russia.

He also welcomed the judicial inquiry Prime Minister Pearson has announced to investigate his firing.

OTTAWA (CP)—Mr. Justice Dalton Wells, of the Ontario Court of Appeals has been appointed a one-man commission to inquire into the George Victor Spencer spy case, Prime Minister Pearson announced today.

He said he would "like the mystery to be cleared up," perhaps an indication that Spencer himself would like the scope of the inquiry extended to include not only his treatment by the government but the activities over which he was dismissed.

SMOKED HEAVILY

The half-bald, bespectacled Spencer smoked heavily during the interview. He kept his head down and appeared extremely nervous and hesitant.

He spoke vaguely of wide studies of research by doctors in many countries that had helped himself and his mother, a "great fund of knowledge of treatment of human beings in sickness."

The studies helped him stand up to difficulties since he was fired last New Year's Eve, he said.

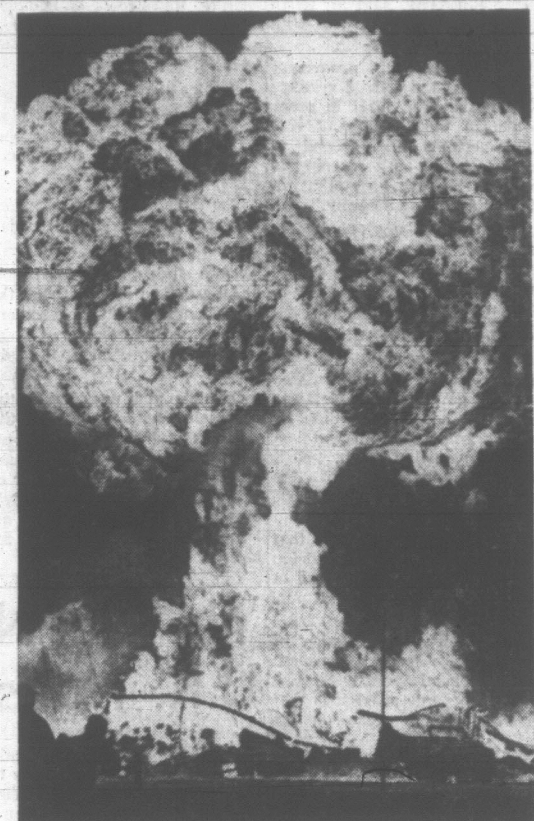

"Do you feel your rights were violated as a Canadian citizen and decorated war veteran," Mr. Webster asked.

"No," Spencer replied. "There's nothing in this life perfect. I've made mistakes."

Had his actions been wrongly interpreted by authorities?

"The authorities haven't interpreted what has happened," Spencer replied.

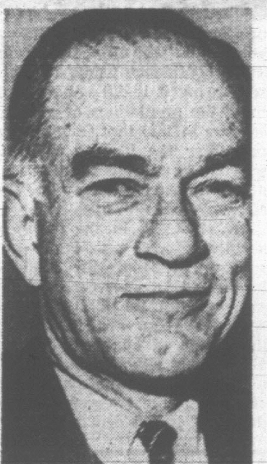

He could see that what he had done could possibly be embarrassing to the government. But he wanted a full questioning "so that all these things can be cleared-up."

SENATOR WARNS:

'Real Danger Of China War'

FULBRIGHT

Aid Bill Approved

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Senate foreign relations committee approved the Johnson administration's $415,000,000 foreign aid authorization bill today after rejecting policy riders opposing widening of the Viet Nam war.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator J. W. Fulbright said Sunday night there is present danger of war with China and announced early U.S. Senate hearings on that Communist-ruled country in an effort to lessen the peril.

The Arkansas Democrat, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee and a critic of U.S. policy in Viet Nam, called in a statement for a searching effort "to increase our understanding of China."

He said that might alter the "fatal expectancy" of war which he asserted is held by Chinese leaders and by some American officials.

Fulbright announced the group will begin Tuesday a series of hearings aimed at increasing public knowledge about China.

He said before fresh political and military decisions are made on Southeast Asia it is essential to try to understand the Chinese and their leaders.

SEES REAL DANGER

"The danger of war is real," he said. "It is real because China is ruled by ideological dogmatists who will soon have nuclear weapons at their disposal and who, though are more ferocious in words than in actions, nonetheless are intensely hostile to the United States."

"In the short run the danger of war between China and America is real because an 'open-ended' war in Viet Nam can bring the two great powers into conflict with each other, by

Justice Minister May Step Down

(Times News Services)

OTTAWA—A crisis atmosphere pervaded Parliament Hill today.

The Commons began a new week amid hints of scandal involving the former Conservative government and the possible resignation of present Justice Minister Lucien Cardin.

One report suggested Prime Minister Pearson himself may step down.

The government is faced with a serious financial crisis. It has no money and must get the remainder of this year's estimates passed today.

The Toronto Star says that if Conservative opposition continues "the only way the government can get money to pay its bills is to dissolve Parliament—or to get a new leader for whom the Tories will pass the estimates."

The Star story said "moderates" in the Conservative party were attempting to avoid a showdown but Opposition Leader Diefenbaker is adamant.

"If Cardin's departure is not enough to soothe the angry opposition parties, informed observers speculate Prime Minister Pearson himself might have to resign to prevent another election ...," the Star said.

Following a cabinet meeting this morning, Prime Minister Pearson said "no question of any resignation" arose.

Just before Pearson came out, Justice Minister Cardin emerged from the Centre Block cabinet room, and with a tight face said: "I have no answer to give you at all," when asked if he was resigning.

SOOTHE ANGER

Parliament Hill buzzed with rumors that Cardin may resign his justice portfolio in an attempt to soothe the opposition's anger over the government's handling of the Spencer spy case.

Cardin was placed in an awkward position when the prime minister reversed his position and granted the opposition's request for an in-camera inquiry in the Spencer case.

Pearson met with the cabinet to approve the terms of reference of a judicial inquiry into the dismissal of George Victor Spencer, 57, from his civil service job after alleged spying activities.

MONSIEUR

JUSTICE MINISTER CARDIN
... 'no answer'

The justice minister's name dropping conjured up the ghost of Olga Munsinger, a beautiful East German girl reputed to have had a torrid liaison with a minister of a former Conservative government while she was employed in a Communist embassy in Ottawa.

Some reports have also indicated Olga may have been entangled with more than one minister of the same cabinet. All reports agree the woman was "a real dish," and some describe her as having been a former beauty queen.

MAIN AFFAIR

The Globe and Mail notes the woman's chief affair was first discovered by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who secured pictures of the girl and her minister-paramour, and informed the Conservative prime minister of his cabinet member's involvement.

Another newspaper, the Toronto Telegram said Diefenbaker was "morally outraged," but eventually was convinced the affair involved only sex, not security.

Cardin challenged Diefenbaker to tell the Commons what he knew of the affair.

At the national convention of the Young Progressive Conservative Party in Toronto, Cardin

Structural Failure Cause of Fuji Crash?

LONDON (UPI)—Aviation Minister Fred Mulley said today preliminary investigations showed the BOAC crash on Mt. Fuji that killed 124 persons Saturday was caused by structural failure in the Boeing 707.

"The reason for the failure is not yet known," Mulley told Parliament.

"I have no reason to doubt that the Japanese authorities will conduct an inquiry and I will appoint an accredited representative to participate in it," he said.

Opposition spokesman on aviation affairs Robert Carr said there seemed to be growing public anxiety over recent airliner crashes and urged Mulley to use his influence to press the inquiry and issue a statement as soon as possible.

Mulley promised to do what he could.

servative Association in Ottawa Saturday, Diefenbaker stormed that the government had attempted to "blackmail" him into silence.

Diefenbaker vowed to his cheering audience that the government tactics had failed, and that his party will press for a royal commission into all aspects of Canada's security, going back to 1944.

NOT INVOLVED

Diefenbaker told the Young Tories that his government had never been involved in anything that could constitute a threat to Canada's security.

He insisted a full inquiry, behind closed doors if necessary, could determine that everything was being done "to meet the challenge of Communist infiltration" through an administration of justice that was "pure and undefiled."

'Ignorant Women' Able to Start War

VANCOUVER (CP)—Women, says Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, would be just as liable as men to push the button of atomic war if they ruled the world.

In a speech to a public affairs conference sponsored by the University of B.C. Alumni Association here Saturday, the former head of the UN Technical Assistance program and now co-chairman of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, said:

"Under the present system of education and distribution of responsibilities, women are more likely than men to be ignorant, unconcerned, prejudiced, indiscriminating and credulous."

He said because of women's limitations in education and restrictions in experience, they are more likely to be reactionary and conservative, and cannot be looked to for enlightened human conduct under the nuclear threat.

He added, however, that the hand that rocks the cradle is not the only one capable of pushing the atomic button. Men, he said, are hell-bent on self-destruction as well.

"It is not at all impossible that we shall end the human story before 1976," he said.

8 Stage Walkouts At Stormy Meeting

ADDIS ABABA (AP)—The stormiest conference in the three-year life of the Organization of African Unity came to an end Saturday night with a final tally of eight nations staging walkouts and one registering a protest by remaining only as an observer.

OAU's handling of the Rhodesia crisis and the meeting's recognition of a delegation from the new military regime in Ghana brought on the split.

After six days of angry debate, charge and countercharge, the foreign ministers' conference finally adopted a resolution

Charged With Murder

TORONTO (CP)—Theresa Trepanier, 46, of Toronto was shot to death Friday night in her home. Her husband, Roland, 52, was charged with capital murder.

Candace 'Picks Up Pieces' After Not Guilty Verdict

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Blonde Candace Mossler set out today, as she put it, to mother a brood of adored children and to "pick up the pieces" of a $33,000,000 banking and loan business.

She was asked in the presence of her nephew, Melvin Lane Powers, at a press conference following their acquittal Sunday in the 1964 slaying of her multi-millionaire husband:

"Mrs. Mossler, will you and Mel Powers be married?"

With a trace of vexation, Mrs. Mossler replied:

"We don't have any intentions in that direction."

Union between aunt and nephew is generally forbidden by U.S. law. Powers is a son of Mrs. Mossler's sister.

Less than three hours earlier, they had been acquitted by an all-male jury of the slaying of her husband, Jacques, 69, who, in the words of the state, was standing in the way of an incestuous love affair between his wife and her nephew.

Mossler died June 30, 1964 of a heavy blow atop the head and 39 stab wounds after screaming: "Don't, don't do that to me." The scene was the Key Biscayne apartment where Mossler lived with his wife and their four adopted children.

Mrs. Mossler, sensitive about her age, places it at 40. Powers, six-foot-three, darkly handsome, is 29.

The jury heard more than 100 witnesses during the seven-week trial, including convicts of the state called from penitentiaries who swore Mrs. Mossler and her nephew had shopped for two years to hire someone to kill her husband.

Failing that, the state claimed, they undertook to do it themselves—Powers actually doing the job.

The jury started deliberating Thursday night, declared themselves hopelessly deadlocked Saturday morning, and finally reached agreement Sunday morning.

After the not guilty verdicts had been read, Powers smiled and let out his breath. Candace's smile started, but lasted only a second before she broke down.

Luong Bui Tung, said a "tough hand" was needed to deal with economic crimes.

The government prosecutor warned that the court's verdicts "will be severe," first in order to punish those guilty of economic crimes and second in order to serve as a warning to those "who are dreaming of making a fortune illegally."

Sentences to be given by the court will range from a minimum of life imprisonment to a maximum of the death penalty, court sources said.

CONFISCATE PROPERTY

Ta Vinh was told that his property would be confiscated by the government. He was given 24 hours in which to request amnesty from Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu, who is also the chairman of the military directorate that runs the country.

Government sources said that if Ta Vinh goes before the firing squad, it may be "composed of women, for psychological purposes."

Ta Vinh was found guilty of attempting to bribe a sergeant in the National Security Service when he became suspicious that security officers were on his trail.

OTHER CHARGES

He also was charged with forcing buyers to pay more than officially set prices for cloth, steel and tin roofing materials and other goods. He was said to have hoarded various goods in order to sell them later at higher prices.

Ta Vinh was acquitted on a fourth charge of illegally transferring money out of the country.

Ta Vinh showed no sign of emotion, except to pass his hand nervously over his face.

But his wife, 31, and children ranging in age from one to 14 broke into cries of anguish and weeping. Ta Vinh was marched out of the room by soldiers with fixed bayonets.

accident or by design, at almost any time.

"Some of our military experts are confident China will not enter the war in Viet Nam. Their confidence would be more reassuring if it did not bring to mind the predictions of military experts in 1950 that China would not enter the Korean War, as well as more recent predictions about an early victory in Viet Nam."

"In fact, it is the view of certain China experts in our government that the Chinese leaders themselves expect to be at war with the United States within a year, and it is clear that some of our own officials also expect a war with China."

Fulbright said the expectation of war often overcomes the desire of both sides to avoid it.

Students Seize Jakarta Office

The students concentrated their attack on Education Minister Sumarto and eased off on their demands that Foreign Minister Subandrio be brought to trial and hanged.

Bands of demonstrators roamed the streets of the city, chanting slogans on cars and passing out anti-government posters.

Groups of university students defied government orders closing the university here and continued to gather in their classrooms and buildings.

The attack on the education ministry met with no resistance.

Some students boarded trucks and buses and drove around the city shouting anti-government slogans and warnings that Communists are infiltrating the cabinet.

Officials and workers at the electricity ministry joined the students in their anti-government demands Monday and accused the electricity minister of being involved in last year's Communist-led abortive coup attempt against the Sukarno regime.

'No Viet Nam Troops' U.K. House Assured

LONDON (AP)—

Britain does not intend to send troops to join American forces in Viet Nam, Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart told the House of Commons today.

Stewart had been asked by Lady Tweedsmuir, a Conservative member of Parliament, whether the U.S. government had asked Britain to send troops to Viet Nam. He did not answer directly but said:

"It is not our intention to do so, in view of our position as co-chairman of the Geneva conference."

Scandal and Corruption Reports Queried
By Rank and File at Party Convention

By AB KENT

The shortest grass roots in the B.C. Liberal party Saturday quizzed federal cabinet brass on items ranging from scandal and corruption to absentee voting.

For an hour, delegates from across the province questioned four ministers from the floor of the B.C. Liberal Association 1966 convention.

The quiz session and three workshop sessions on resolutions held Friday were judged the most popular parts of the convention, which dealt with fewer than 50 of 100 resolutions intended for plenary sessions.

The four ministers who appeared were Transport Minister Jack Pickersgill, Defence Minister Paul Hellyer, Labor Minister John Nicholson, and Indian and Northern Affairs Minister Arthur Laing.

Mr. Nicholson was asked to explain the "innuendoes" of the Victor Spencer spy case which has upset Parliament in recent days.

AIR OF RELIEF

"Mr. Nicholson said it was with an air of relief Friday that members received word from Prime Minister Pearson that a limited judicial inquiry into the case would be held.

(Victor Spencer was a post office clerk discharged by cabinet order for national security reasons, but not prosecuted. He made no complaint about his dismissal but asked for a hearing on the matter of lost pension rights.)

Mr. Nicholson said a 1962 amendment (by the Conservative government) to the Civil Service Act enabled the cabinet to deal with misconduct cases.

Most Canadians, including several members of Parliament, did not appreciate until Friday that a problem existed, the minister said.

When the matter of misconduct in the Spencer case came up originally, Parliament accorded the responsibility of dealing with it to the cabinet and a decision was made, he said.

NEVER ASKED

"Never, never, until yesterday did the man ask to have the matter investigated," Mr. Nicholson said.

Spencer had, in fact, commended the way in which the matter was handled, including his treatment by the RCMP, the minister said.

But Friday, "in spite of what he had done, he felt badly treated in the matter of his pension and wanted it reviewed. 'The prime minister made it clear he wouldn't be able to go into details of the espionage tactics of the foreign power involved,' the convention was told.

Mr. Nicholson said the case is 'not very different from an average case of an employee guilty of some breach of conduct where the employer has the right to discharge.'

COST-SHARING

Mr. Pickersgill was asked a series of constitutional questions which boiled down to how he felt the federal government should participate in cost-sharing programs.

The minister said he was opposed to 50-50 cost-sharing programs between federal and provincial governments because these are easy for rich provinces but not for poorer ones.

The sooner the federal government vacated the areas of provincial jurisdiction in cost-sharing programs, the better, Mr. Pickersgill said.

Cost-sharing programs should be used only as "pump-priming" measures to get things started, he said.

A delegate asked about proposed expansion of CBC radio programming in the Vancouver area to French language and whether other ethnic groups are being considered.

Since only French and English have official status in Canada, the problem does not exist, Mr. Pickersgill said.

CBC DECISION

But it is strictly a CBC decision, he pointed out, and the corporation has stated its intention of expanding French broadcasting wherever there is a significant pocket of population using the language.

Ministers were asked if they intend to rectify irregularities of corruption and graft in the government as published in the last auditor-general's report.

"The question is mis-statement of fact," Mr. Pickersgill said.

"I've read the auditor-general's report and I found no evidence anywhere of any graft or corruption."

Mr. Nicholson said there is no evidence of it, but there are errors of judgment listed in the report.

Mr. Laing was asked about off-shore exploration rights and the dispute between Ottawa and Victoria.

It was his personal feeling that in the matter of off-shore rights, a company should not be taxed until it has found something and is producing, such as oil.

Natural resources should be left uncommitted as long as possible, he said. "The longer we keep them the more valuable they become."

They are "our great capital gain for the future," he said. "Canada has, for example, 35 per cent of the world's fresh water supply."

TWO-PLUS-TWO MAKES FIVE

Leadership Race Denied; Support for PM Echoed

Three federal cabinet ministers here Saturday denied there is any race for the leadership of the national Liberal party.

They stated their support for the prime minister-as leader of the party.

One of them, Labor Minister John Nicholson, said Prime Minister Pearson had "said unequivocally that I will remain as leader as long as the party wants me."

Mr. Nicholson, Defence Minister Paul Hellyer, Transport Minister Jack Pickersgill and Indian and Northern Affairs Minister Arthur Laing were here to take part in B.C. Liberal Association 1966 convention.

All but Mr. Pickersgill took part in a press conference after a "quiz the cabinet ministers" session on the convention floor at Empress Hotel.

Mr. Pickersgill excused himself, according to the other ministers, because he didn't want to "scoop himself" on a press conference he plans for Vancouver on Tuesday.

Mr. Hellyer, who is one of four ministers touted as seeking the Liberal leadership, said a national press wire service had circulated the story of a leadership race by "putting two and two together and making five."

It was strictly speculation, he said, that he and the others are campaigning to become leader.

The other three mentioned are External Affairs Minister Paul Martin, Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp and Trade Minister Robert Winters.

The press conference in Vancouver will enable Mr. Pickersgill to make a statement on Vancouver harbor facilities, which are currently under fire as inadequate.

Mr. Laing said areas around Vancouver would be considered as possible sites for new deep-sea loading terminals, and that planning should be done 10-15 years ahead to the day when super bulk carriers can be accommodated.

The northern affairs minister also said the federal government is willing to give B.C. another chance to turn over Garibaldi Park development to his department.

As a national park, Garibaldi would be a $10-million-a-year revenue producer for B.C., worth more than if it were developed by private parties for its tree and mineral wealth, Mr. Laing said.

He predicted the provisional estimates before Parliament will go through, despite the current charges flying about in Ottawa.

Although it is eight weeks since Parliament convened and no legislation has been dealt with, the opposition is seizing the moment to "attack the government on all fronts," Mr. Laing said.

"In the absence of a clear mandate there is an atmosphere of stalemate in the House," he said. But he felt this would be broken because "no one is going to attempt to force another election."

Mr. Hellyer agreed with this assessment.

LIBERAL PARTY VOTING

'Old Guard' Wins Posts

Election of B.C. Liberal party officers Saturday was a victory for the old guard and put down a bid for feminist leadership.

Voting delegates at the Liberal Association's 1966 convention supported the "party" candidates for president and vice-president, suppressing a youthful avant garde movement led by the B.C. Young Liberals group.

President Lawrence Jolivet, Vancouver businessman, was re-elected for two years, defeating Walter Craig, North Vancouver lawyer and president of North Vancouver Liberals, who had Young Liberals backing.

Boyd Ferris, a Vancouver lawyer, was given the first vice-presidency, and Pentecost realtor Bruce Howard was elected second vice-president.

Helen Kalyk, a member of Burnaby Parks Board and a former councillor, was a last-minute candidate for president.

'Spirit of Adventure' Needed in Development

Canadians should take more risks to put a spirit of adventure in development of national resources.

That was the message of Defence Minister Paul Hellyer Saturday, wind-up speaker at B.C. Liberal Association's 1966 convention banquet in the Empress Hotel.

"But we can do something about it. We can increase national savings. We can participate in resource development. We can save more. We can change habits."

"We can divert more from conservative securities, the blue chips, and take more risks to participate as Canadians in development of our own industries," Mr. Hellyer told 420 listeners.

The future greatness of Canada leaves no room for pessimism, he said. "We have so much to be thankful for."

Development of Canada into a strong nation needs more than money, however. It requires know-how or an increased level of skills through upgrading technical and academic levels; it needs investment in schools, universities, technical schools and research facilities; it needs a greater population, the minister said.

ADVANTAGE

"Is it an advantage to us to maintain a political identity?" he asked. "My answer to this question is a resounding yes."

Besides the emotional root—"I'm just plain proud to be a Canadian"—Mr. Hellyer said there are distinct advantages to Canada and the world arising from this independence.

Canada is able to lead in formation of NATO policies and in financial measures adopted during the Second World War, he said.

Prime Minister Pearson is able to play a leading role as peacemaker—"in my opinion the greatest international statesman this country has ever produced."

CANADA CAN LEAD

Canada can lead where the United Nations is unable to, resulting in stability in Europe, he said, and it is time to renegotiate NATO to plan for the next decade or two.

Integration of armed forces is another way Canada can contribute, an idea being watched closely by many countries and one supported by some of the greatest military leaders, he said.

Finally, political independence has allowed Canada to be of distinct help as a bilingual and multi-cultural nation in its efforts in The Congo, Cyprus and at NATO.

"One should not be alarmed at what is happening in Quebec," he said. He referred to changes there as an agricultural, technical, financial and educational revolution and the rest of Canada should recognize the benefits.

It will enhance not just the destiny of Quebec, but of all Canada. "This is a big plus for Canada—cultural enrichment that makes us just a bit special," Mr. Hellyer said.

Former Aide To Castro Charged

HAVANA (AP)—A key figure in the revolution which paved the way for Fidel Castro's Communist regime is charged with plotting to assassinate the Cuban prime minister.

Rolando Cubelas Secades, a widely known medical doctor and a former major who was one of Castro's commanders in the Escambray Mountains during the struggle against president Fulgencio Batista, is the man charged with being designated to carry out the alleged assassination.

Another former major, Ramon Guin Diaz, is charged with knowing of the plot, but concealing it, and of spying for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

The Cuban government also charges that Cuban exiles hatched the plot in Spain with the help of exile leader Manuel Artime and the CIA.

The charges were contained in a statement Sunday in the Communist newspaper Granma, designed to clarify a communique issued Saturday which charged both men with plotting the assassination.

Artime, commenting in Miami Sunday, said: "This is merely a false pretext of Castro to initiate another bloody purge."

Artime was the Cuban leader of the Bay of Pigs invasion and heads the Cuban revolution recovery movement.

Policy or Pillage?

WHILE THE PROVINCIAL government has tried to give an impression of necessity or logic to the successive steps that are leading to the invasion of Strathcona Park, the eventual result—the result which not only this generation but succeeding ones will see—can only brand as irresponsible shortsighted those who have contributed to this sorry development.

The spoliation of the Buttle Lake wonderland, which was achieving an international reputation as a natural paradise, was begun with the damming of the Campbell River complex for power. The consequent rise of water in Buttle Lake wiped out the few beaches and camping spots on its shores, and these were never adequately replaced although the original plans called for such improvements.

But even this would have been tolerable if there had been a firm prohibition of any further industrial tampering with the park. Instead there were logging inroads in certain areas, road construction on park land and a general governmental open-mindedness to commercial proposals. It is true that timber and mining rights in the park area had been established many years before, even antedating creation of the park. But the same motives of preserving irreplaceable natural beauty which caused creation of the park in the first place should have been reinforced by government action to purchase or otherwise retire the claims of private interests on public recreational property.

The present Parks Act provides no real protection against this situation, and the predilection of the current Social Credit government for almost any scheme which will produce money has led to governmental encouragement of the present program of mining development in Strathcona Park. Under powers granted by the Act, the boundary lines of any parkland can be shifted at will; its category may be juggled to conform with any government plan, there is no real guarantee of security or perpetuation since a government act can wipe out even the limited degree of conservation which is now enjoyed.

The mining development at Buttle Lake is proceeding rapidly. The argument as to whether or not the park shall be further desecrated has been altered; it is now concerned merely with the degree to which additional inroads will be permitted. It is no longer a question of whether the lake shall be polluted with refuse from the mine, but whether the foreign matter shall be dumped into the lake or drainage from it be allowed to run in.

In the company's thinking, it is not a question of whether a townsite shall be established beside the lake, but which spot shall be selected. The legislative committee now examining this question still has a chance to insist that the town be located outside the park's boundaries, but there is heavy pressure to place it within.

Strathcona Park is too fine a public asset to write off as lost to industrialization. It has been badly abused already, but conservationists must fight to the last moment to preserve what is left. The reason lies not only in Strathcona, but in all the other parks in the province. Precedents set at Buttle Lake will be quoted by every commercial interest that has plans to invade this or other parks. And the government appears to be incapable of seeing the irreparable harm that can ensue.

The retreat at Buttle Lake will leave many other park areas open to plunder. Parks minister Kiernan is fully aware that many hundreds of timber licences and mining claims are to be found within British Columbia's parklands. They lie in Garibaldi, Tweedsmuir and others, including the glorious Manning Park. What does the government have in mind?

Whatever is permitted at Strathcona will be the pattern for a host of demands from other enterprisers. Already the Social Credit member for Skeena is urging a vast lumbering development in Tweedsmuir Park which would effectively destroy it for any other purpose except, perhaps, mining.

The government's ministers are taking a lasting responsibility in condoning irretrievable steps. Once spoiled, these public parklands—supposedly set aside for all time as natural museums and recreational areas—cannot be rebuilt or restored. Let us get some perspective in our thinking. Let us not destroy assets worth millions for industrial returns in thousands. Let us not smash our priceless vases to make ashtrays.

Economics of Drug Addiction

A RECENT REPORT ON THE costs of narcotic addiction in the United States says that in New York City alone, estimates of the value of goods stolen by addicts to support their drug habits run as high as half a billion dollars a year.

The statistic appears in an item which quotes an addict to the effect that his habit costs him from $20 to $25 a day. Supporting it by theft, he steals an average of $250 worth of valuables a day, and he explains this arithmetic with the statement: "I need to 'lift' that much because the black market only pays me a tenth of the value of stolen goods."

This is merely one facet of a complex problem, but it underscores one of the economic considerations in the illegal traffic.

The public is victimized by the "junkie" who steals the material. He and his victims are further victimized by the "fence" who receives the stolen goods. And then the public pays a further price for the police, court and custodial services involved in caring for the addict who is apprehended, plus the costs of remedial action where efforts are made to divorce him from his dependence on narcotics.

There are, of course, many other costs in intangibles inflicted on society by addiction and the illegal traffic. But the straight economics of drug addiction should encourage, for the most hard-headed reasons, investigation of a control system considerably more effective than that generally used in the United States and Canada.

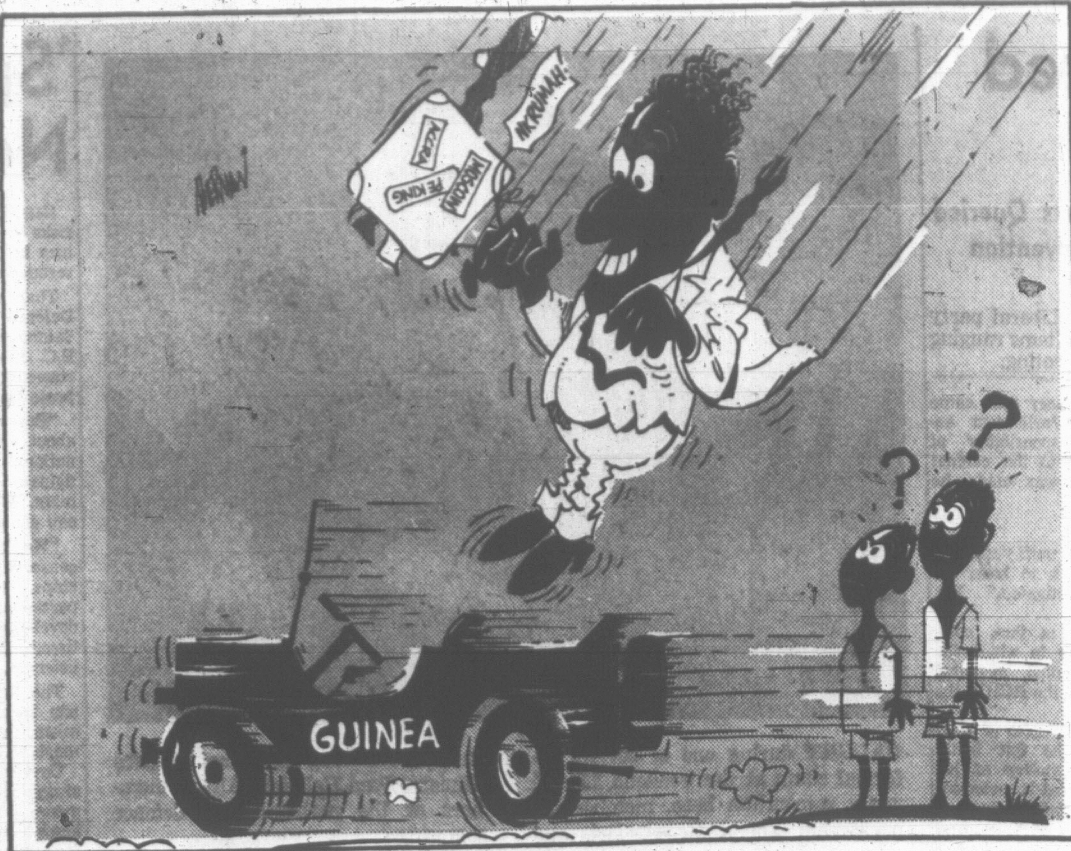

New York is intensifying its search for a more rewarding approach to the issue. At Matsqui a treatment centre is now coming into operation. The results of the American quest and of the British Columbia experiment will be closely watched. Possibly new ground is being broken to overcome a social evil which has for too long exacted a heavy toll both in physical and human values on this continent.

The One-Way Street

REVENUE MINISTER E. J. Benson told the Commons last week that his department so far has not found any way of making refunds to employers who have over-subscribed to the Canada Pension Fund. He added that in the United States for 20 years, administrators of the Social Security plan have been trying to set up a workable mechanism by which refunds could be made but without success.

This is the sort of government bureaucratic process which staggers the imagination of the ordinary citizen. That the fertile genius of minds which can figure out all manner of methods by which to part the citizen from a portion of his income cannot successfully cope with this problem is difficult to understand.

Mr. Benson! How about this: if an employer pays in too much to the pension fund, the fund just turns around and pays it back?

EYEWITNESS ON THE U.S.A. SCENE

Problem: To Moderate the Boom Before It Goes Bang

SHORTLY before he died in 1946 John Maynard Keynes, the most influential economist since Adam Smith, warned certain American friends against a situation which then seemed unbelievable. After a time, said Keynes, his plans for economic abundance would succeed too well and, if mismanaged by politicians, would produce inflation followed by inevitable collapse. He was preparing to write a book on the danger of his own economics if they were pressed too far. Death forestalled that final testament. But today in the United States, as elsewhere, the first half of his prediction is fully confirmed.

Starting with Roosevelt's New Deal, the Keynesian system has achieved a level of affluence unknown before now in any time or nation. It has also reached the peril point foreseen by its architect. All the unprecedented gains of recent years, all the dreams of the Johnsonian Great Society and all the hopes of a prosperous world could be postponed, or lost, if the United States failed to cool its overheated boom.

As he indicated in his recent economic message to the Congress, President Johnson is well aware of these perils. While he does not pretend to be an economist and has a western frontiersman's deep distrust of eastern financiers, the President can command the best economic brains in the nation and he listens to them. His advisers are divided on the size and timing of the inflationary threat but

This, of course, is not a risk to the United States alone. If it cannot be managed by strong measures during the present year the entire world economy will skid because it is vitally dependent on American prosperity. In that event no sector will suffer more than Canada because it lives largely on the American market and inherits the American price level automatically.

For two clear reasons—apart altogether from the value of the people's savings—the United States cannot afford any substantial price rise at present. In the first place, it would distort the internal economy and slow down if it did not reverse economic growth. In the second, it would damage the United States' competitive position in the world market, diminish its exports, worsen its payments deficit and undermine its currency.

All the unprecedented gains of recent years, all the dreams of the Johnsonian Great Society and all the hopes of a prosperous world could be postponed, or lost, if the United States failed to cool its overheated boom.

As he indicated in his recent economic message to the Congress, President Johnson is well aware of these perils. While he does not pretend to be an economist and has a western frontiersman's deep distrust of eastern financiers, the President can command the best economic brains in the nation and he listens to them. His advisers are divided on the size and timing of the inflationary threat but not on its nature. None of them denies the central fact.

It is that the United States has created an economy of full employment and is using virtually all the resources immediately available. This remains true even when pockets of poverty and idleness exist in some regions and among some people who cannot be brought overnight into the stream of production. Total demand is pressing hard on total supply.

These inflationary pressures, it is commonly said, come for the most part from the drain of the Viet Nam war. Actually the war's cost, though large, is a minute fraction of the gigantic American income, but it causes bottlenecks in some supplies like metals. It diverts manpower from productive work. It worsens the American balance of international payments by some $700 million a year, or half last year's total deficit.

Wage-Price Cycle

The real inflationary danger comes, however, from internal factors, the old familiar wage-price cycle which already is beginning to violate the President's voluntary guide lines of responsible behavior by management and labor unions. Until recently moderation on both sides of the industrial bargaining table, aided by presidential exhortation and sometimes by direct intervention, kept prices fairly stable. Now the President's magic is running out.

Labor demands higher wages than his guide lines permit. Management resents his interference in prices. The wholesale price index, the key indicator,

Cranks Contribute Too

As a participant in the Academic Symposium which the Alma Mater Society of the University of Victoria held at Parkville, I would like to convey my appreciation and that of several other faculty members who were present, of the accurate, fair and thoroughly competent presentation given by Desmond Bill in the Times.

As a sociologist, however, I feel obliged to clarify his report on the remarks of Alan Mackenzie. In saying that it is a mad world and that more people, especially university students, should be maladjusted to it and enjoy being so, Mackenzie was not advocating irresponsible or socially harmful behavior. Rather he was attempting to stress the enriching contribution to any community, especially a university, made by the personalities of eccentrics, non-conformists, cranks and colorful characters of all kinds.

To me no educated person can be less than unique. Surely then, it is only honorable for a truly educated individual in modern mass society to refuse to allow himself to become dehumanized.—T. Rennie Warburton, Lecturer in Sociology.

Inflation Hazard

That serious inflation threatens the United States, at the worst possible moment, is no longer in question. The only question is whether (as Keynes privately doubted) a democratic government can apply the economic brakes as successfully as it applied the accelerator; or whether the opulent vehicle of the American economy, moving too fast, must skid off the road at the curve immediately ahead.

FROM WASHINGTON

Viet Nam: Time to End the Confusion

NOT nearly enough attention has been given the events leading up to the Viet Nam vote in the Senate last week. Yet they are very interesting, not least because they suggest that "too clever by half" is the best description of the president's present leadership. The key event was a meeting of the senatorial dissidents on the Monday afternoon before the final vote, in Senator Fulbright's office. The main question under discussion was what to do about the three supplementary resolutions that then seemed to be in prospect in the Senate. These were as follows:

First, Senator Morse's resolution to revoke the earlier congressional action sustaining the president at the time of the Tonkin Gulf incident.

Second, a resolution by Senator Russell of Georgia, renewing and confirming the powers granted the president at the time of the Tonkin Gulf incident.

Third, a resolution by Senator Fulbright declaring war on North Viet Nam, which the chairman of the foreign relations committee believed would rally the maximum number of votes against the president.

Like all such senatorial rallies, this was pretty disorganized. Yet it had a kind of blurt of its own. A significant episode was the appearance of Sen. Robert Kennedy, with the news that the administration had agreed to try to persuade Senator Russell to withdraw his pro-Johnson resolution. On this basis, most of the moderate dissidents urged withdrawal of the other two resolutions as well.

Behind Scenes Manoeuvring

With some hesitation, Senator Fulbright went along with dropping his pseudo-declaration of war. Many senators present begged Morse to follow suit, on the ground that they could not support his resolution, which would therefore get only a trifling vote. Even Morse was thought to have agreed at the close.

As might have been expected, of course, the temptation of the headlines proved too much for Senator Morse. Alone among the three above-mentioned, the Morse resolution was offered on the floor. It got exactly five votes, including only two surprises, Fulbright and (unkind but for the vice-president) McCarthy of Minnesota. On the main vote, there were only two against.

So the great show in the Senate ended, with many a newspaper story saying that these votes under-represented the opposition to Johnson. They did indeed, but the question is, how much?

The meeting in Fulbright's office may be considered as the measure of the hard core, and indeed included several men like Senator Kennedy who are by no means hard core dissidents. It was attended by only 17 or 18 senators. To this, in a real pinch, one might have to add one or two more Democrats like the majority leader, Senator Mansfield, and two or three Republicans, like Senators Cooper and Aiken.

In short, the real opposition to the president at this time hardly reaches 30 votes in a Senate of 100 members. And the important fact to note is not that the vote on the Morse resolution failed to register the full opposition to Johnson. The important fact to note is that with 80 per cent of the Senate ready to vote with him, even in a pinch, the president now has stronger support than any war-president in American history.

Reaching for Dissidents

That is a remarkable fact. It indicates in turn, that the president as leader is being too clever by half (and that is putting it very mildly), simply because he is always reaching out for the few birds in the bush, and thereby endangering the numerous birds in hand.

On the morning of the Senate vote, for instance, he made another meaningless "peace offer" to Hanoi—an inane gesture supposedly calculated to smooth the feathers of the Senate doves. This was standard image-war-making. There was a lot more image-war-making in Secretary of Defence McNamara's recent statements. And image-war-making is even hampering the efficient conduct of the war.

Sowing Confusion

This image-war-making, this prating of peace is daily more unwise. It is not winning votes. It is sowing confusion in the country. No one can understand what the president is up to, what he really wants, where he is going and how he plans to get there.

It is time, in short, for him to say forthrightly, "we are in a war, and the American way of dealing with wars is to win them." By "running Old Glory up the flagpole" (as one of his frustrated advisers has put it) he would strongly consolidate his support in Congress and the country. Whereas the universal confusion that now prevails constantly threatens to erode that support.

In sum, President Johnson deserves enormous credit for a long series of decisions courageously taken since Pleiku last winter. Maybe he was right at the beginning that they must be taken late and furiously. But surely the time for firmness and pretence has now passed. Copyright (C) 1966, the Washington Post Co.

Inflationary Budget

At the moment when the budget should be at least mildly deflationary it is in truth inflationary to a high degree. Government pours into the spending current far more money than it takes out and thereby stimulates when it should be braking the economy.

Hence it is almost certain, unless conditions change suddenly, that the United States will be compelled before long to reverse its recent policy of tax cuts or let the boom run wild, as Keynes feared long ago.

Exactly 20 years since the great economist's death an American president, then unknown, confronts the ultimate challenge of Keynesian economics: Can a free society, pumped up by state stimulants of many kinds, take the harsh, essential medicine of restraint while there is still time? And if so, can the boom be moderated without the dislocation of a bust?

Such a smooth, sensible readjustment to reality was never achieved under similar conditions in the past without at least a pause in business growth. After all these bitter lessons, and with all the accumulated economic expertise since Keynes' time, we shall soon see whether readjustment short of serious shock is possible now.

Even if it is, another imponderable overhangs the world economy and it has been given the popular name of "liquidity."

Having long resisted the foreign theory that the world needs a third reserve currency to support the dollar and the pound, the United States has lately become the chief advocate of this daring reform which means nothing less than a measure of world government over money.

Liquidity

The details of the proposed currency managed by an international body of some sort are too complex for explanation here, but it can be said on the best authority that the United States expects to see the problem of liquidity solved within the next two years at latest. The same hope is confidently shared at Ottawa.

When the United States is drastically restricting the supply of dollars in foreign countries by reducing its own payments deficit the need of more liquidity is no longer theoretical. It has become so practical and urgent that it must be faced without much delay. Whether it can be faced and mastered in time remains to be seen. Meanwhile, as a final report will try to explain, the world faces a still more pressing danger. It may be called the Malthusian squeeze, the imminent risk of wholesale starvation.

Looking Back

From The Times of March 7, 1966:

The political battle which has been waged in Victoria for the past two weeks was brought to a close yesterday when the Liberal candidate, Wm. Templeman won decisively. The opposition made a desperate fight, but from the beginning of the hostilities it was evident that the forces were not strong enough to cope with an army which has swept everything before it in Canada. The last fort to be attacked was Victoria and this has been carried. The results were: Templeman (Liberal), 1,553; Beckwith (Conservative), 867; Marcon (Socialist), 308.

COMMUNAL RICHES

We need the poet and the musician, the dramatist and the craftsman in a community, as we need the clergy and the doctors and the nurses and the midwives as part of the community—not all separated and living miles apart. Life is so much the poorer if we haven't got a real community life. This is a world problem and, to a great extent, a new problem.

Quit NATO, Commonwealth; Join OAS, Says Noted Editor

By ARNOLD EDINBOROUGH
Editor, Saturday Night

Canada cannot stand on its own in the world; without external trade we would be bankrupt; without military allies we would be defenceless.

The aim of our external affairs policy, therefore, must be to choose our allies shrewdly and plan our trading partnerships carefully. Our proximity to the United States means that we must also look for mutual support in these two areas against the overwhelming influence of the U.S.

U.S. Policies

If we ignore this influence we are likely to become involved willy-nilly in those policies which suit our great neighbor but which, despite our many common interests, don't suit us. (Trade with Red China, Cuba and the military involvement in Viet Nam are current examples.)

For years we have had Great Britain as both market and bulwark. Tradition expected it, self-interest urged it. As a senior partner in the Commonwealth (though a reluctant one in the Thirties), we got far more out of that association than we ever put into it.

But Britain's position, both economically and politically, has declined in the last twenty years and the Commonwealth has become so loose and ill-defined an organization as to be useless.

Flickers of Life

There are still some flickers of life in it when it can impose sanctions on Rhodesia but when two member-nations went to war, it was communists who mediated the dispute in Tashkent — hardly a Commonwealth centre.

Aware of this atrophying relationship, it has been Canadian policy to look for a new alignment in the post-war years.

Our first venture was into NATO where we believed,

Public debate over whether Canada should join the Organization of American States is growing and it seems likely that this will soon become a major issue of Canadian foreign policy. Well-known Canadian writer and editor, Arnold Edinborough, in the latest issue of Saturday Night magazine favors membership in the OAS—but he goes further. He asks if Canada should not get out of NATO and diminish the bonds with the Commonwealth.

Against all logic, that Article 2 could be worked out to the mutual economic advantage of the Atlantic community. But the Atlantic community never was a viable entity and we now are faced with the simple fact that a military alliance born in fear disappears with that fear. After all, what elements of economic or ideological policy can possibly be mon Market has not been without serious threats.

There are two other places where we might now look. The first is the Organization of American States. Severe pressure is being exerted from Washington to urge us into this group, and feeling is growing in the department of external affairs that we should join.

On the face of it, such a move would be attractive. If we can no longer have a European or strong Commonwealth connection, then we should try to move into a position of strength in this hemisphere.

Branch Plant

We face some of the same problems as the countries of Latin America. We have a branch plant economy, just as Mexico and Venezuela have. Again, since we have never extended ourselves in aiding underdeveloped nations (our per capita contribution is less than that of Great Britain or the United States) we could surely help develop Latin America, and would be welcomed as partners in such an enterprise.

There is a further reason for considering membership in the OAS. The United States has always treated Latin America in a very high-handed fashion. Their record in New Mexico, Mexico and other places in the last century has been paralleled by their disastrous interventions in Guatemala, Cuba and the Dominican Republic in the last five years.

The United States, founded on revolution, dedicated to anti-colonialism, and passionate in its belief in populist democracy, has never been farther from its traditions than in its Latin American posture.

Perhaps, therefore, if we join the Organization we can build a better case for democracy than the United States has. If we can involve ourselves in the vital reforms which must come in the southern hemisphere, they will be democratic ones — not communist, like Cuba's.

UN Alternative

Admittedly, to opt out of NATO and minimize our involvement in the Commonwealth because neither seems to work, and then get too involved with the OAS which hasn't worked yet, doesn't seem much of an alternative. But the only other one is action at the United Nations.

Just now, that institution is in too disarrayed a state for a country the size of Canada to have any effect. The great matters there are lack of money, the seating of China and the volatility of the new African and Asian nations.

To make any headway against these battles of the giants, there would need to be a solid new grouping of the middle nations. We would need more external strength than we now command — to launch, any move to achieve that. Maybe an apprenticeship in the OAS would help us towards it.

Clear Objectives

In any case, membership in the OAS would sharpen our external policy would give us clear objectives in external aid, and, above all, if it were properly interpreted to the people of Canada, would give us the kind of external involvement that would lessen our present almost total engrossment with domestic matters.

In the old days a king being attacked at home would unite his followers by going to attack someone abroad. Is it too idealistic to expect in this century that we can lessen our divisions at home by attacking poverty, hunger and oppression abroad by more humane and longer lasting methods than the armies of old?

I, for one, hope not, and at this stage the OAS looks a more likely bet to start it than the UN.

Trouble Expected From Syria

By PATRICK SEALE

BEIRUT — The fierce young officers who seized power in Syria on February 23 could prove immensely disruptive to the peace and stability of the Middle East.

They are not likely to tread cautiously in the intricate minefield of Arab politics. Already with their revolution barely two weeks old they have been laying about them in unguarded terms and hackles have been rising visibly in neighboring states.

They will probably feel impelled to pursue an "activist" policy both at home and abroad to justify their coup d'etat. They are, for the most part, impatient and doctrinaire, with little experience of international affairs. Revolutionary Syria under their management will be a difficult country to live with.

Two civilians have been appointed to top jobs in the state — Dr. Nureddine Attasi, 36, as head of state, and Dr. Jusuf Zayzen, 34, as prime minister — but real power lies with the soldiers' (London Observer Service)

THE GALLUP POLL

Whopping Majority Say 'No' to Federal Election

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Canadians give a clear-cut mandate to the government — no more elections for awhile. Almost eight-in-ten (79 per cent) of the voters are obviously fed up with elections.

About one-in-ten (11 per cent) would favor another general election soon.

The people have been consistent in their wish not to have the government run to the polls every two years or so. This bears out the fact that a majority government is not important to the voters as it is to the members of Parliament. In 1964 and 1965 more than half of the people wanted the government to carry on. Today that number has increased to the whopping majority of more than three-quarters of the electors.

The Question: "As you may know, the present government in Ottawa does not have an over-all majority of seats. Which alternative do you think the government should follow — carry on a government until they have to have an election, or have an election as soon as possible?"

Arabian Handicrafts Anyone?

The New Republic

Why did Lebanese newspapers think President Johnson's brother-in-law, Antonio J. Taylor of Santa Fe, was not, as Washington said he was, a special consultant on how to market Jordanian handicrafts, but was a secret arms salesman?

The most plausible explanation is that unresolved conflicts have produced a new armaments race in the Middle East, and along with it, rising irrationality.

The three monarchies, Iran, Jordan and Saudi Arabia, are drawing closer together because of pressures at work in the whole area.

Egypt, greatly weakened by the stalemate in the Yemen but eager nevertheless to make her influence felt in Libya and in the Eastern Arab countries, continues to get massive arms from the Soviet Union. Food supplies sent to Cairo by the U.S. enable President Nasser to pledge more of his own country's resources as payment for Soviet arms.

Arms Sought

Syria and Iraq have hopelessly applied to the Pentagon for arms, but no answer has yet been forthcoming. So President Arafat of Iraq, ever an optimist, sent his brother, Major-General Abdur Rahman Arafat, deputy chief of staff, to the Soviet Union for arms. Syria, too, has asked Russia for military hardware.

Saudi Arabia has placed a large contract for aircraft and radar equipment in Britain, with the blessing of the U.S. Jordan is getting 100 Patton tanks. Israel, surrounded by this flood of arms, is negotiating with French private firms for co-operation in building rockets.

Why do the Arabs want more planes, guns, rockets, tanks? Because of Israel in the first place, in the second place against each other, and thirdly for fighting minorities like the Kurds.

There is a fourth reason. No Arab regime can survive whose armies have been defeated in the field. The Jews defeated King Farouk; Nasser was only saved by the temporary American-Soviet alliance. General Kassem of Iraq was overthrown because his armies had been bruised by the Kurds.

Weak Position

The Iraq president has accused the Persians of supporting the Kurdish rebels. Teheran contemptuously denied this. The fighting goes on. Iraq is in a weak position because the Russians are reluctant to spoil their improved relations with Iran for the sake of the Iraqis.

As for President Nasser, American experts who have just been to Yemen say whatever happens there will be a disaster for him. If he has to withdraw his defeated troops, he will have them on his hands, resentful, unpaid and contemptuous of their officers. If he lets them fight on they will again be defeated. New skirmishes have already started in and around Baidha.

In Jordan, meanwhile, the Palestine Liberation Army continues to conscript young men, and the UN is going to reduce its Scandinavian force in the vital Gaza Strip by 200 men, to save money.

Handicrafts, anyone?

World's 'Poor Countries' In Desperate Need of Aid

By ESCOTT REID

(Extracts from an address to the English-Speaking Union in Toronto. Mr. Reid is principal of Glendon College, York University, Toronto. He was Canadian high commissioner in India from 1952 to 1957; ambassador to Germany from 1958 to 1962; and director of the World Bank's operations in South Asia and the Middle East from 1962 to 1965.)

ESCOTT REID

Some years ago we used to call the countries which need international aid, the underdeveloped countries. This was not considered polite and they were then called the less developed countries or even the LDCs.

Now the fashionable term is developing countries.

I am not going to call them by any of these terms. I shall strike a blow for direct, simple English by calling them poor countries.

There exists today a widespread uneasy feeling that the world has reached some kind of crisis in the relations between rich and poor countries.

Without Hope

There is a wide-spread uneasy feeling that the rich and the poor countries cannot together resolve this crisis in a reasonably sensible way within a reasonable time, most of the terribly poor of the world — and two out of three men, women and children in the world are terribly poor — most of the terribly poor of the world will be left without much reason to believe in the possibility of a much better life for themselves and for their children.

The consequences of this can be profound. The problem of the economic development of poor countries is one of the two great problems of the last third of the twentieth century on which we are now entering. It is comparable in importance to the problem of the relations between the Western world and China.

Levelling Off

One of the main reasons for the present feeling of crisis about the relations of rich and poor countries is that the amount of financial resources moving from the rich countries to the poor countries has been levelling off. The gross flow now is about the same as it was in 1961.

The rich countries have got a great deal richer in the past five years. Their combined annual gross national products have probably gone up by about $40 billion. They have not shared any of this new wealth of $40 billion a year with the poor countries.

What order of magnitude of aid is required?

The net official flow of long term capital from the rich members of the World Bank to the poor members is now about $6 billion a year or about six-tenths of one per cent of their combined gross national products.

Africans at UN Worried By Series of Coups

By JOYCE EGGINTON

UNITED NATIONS — The African bloc — the most powerful voting section of United Nations membership — is becoming increasingly disorganized and dishevelled as the number of coups on the African continent mounts.

The fall of Ghana's President Kwame Nkrumah had the African diplomats here torn between delight at the downfall of an unpopular dictatorship, and fear that their own governments may suffer a similar fate.

In the third-floor press section of the United Nations there is the familiar stream of junior officials of the affected country trailing in to the offices of Reuters and other news agencies, trying to find out what is going on in their own capital. This has been a frequent event in the past three months, the only change being the nationality of the diplomats — from Congo to Dahomey, the Central African Republic, Upper Volta, Nigeria and now Ghana.

In almost every case the dramatic changes in government have made little difference to the UN diplomats' jobs.

Ambassadors and their staffs have remained in New York posts, usually because — in the case of recently

I have no hesitation in saying that this should be increased immediately by at least 50 per cent, that is from $6 billion a year to $9 or $10 billion a year. This is the minimum figure suggested by the conservative economists of the conservative, tough-minded, World Bank.

These economists have concluded that the poor countries could put to constructive use, over the next five years, some $3 to $4 billion more each year than is currently being made available to them.

We must not delude ourselves that this kind of increase in aid will be sufficient for long. It will not. My own guess is that we should think in terms of tripling net aid over the next 10 years.

$18 Billions

This would mean that our target for 1976 should be about $18 billion a year. Assuming that the gross national products of the rich members of the World Bank increase by five per cent a year, $18 billion in 1976 would be a little under one per cent of the combined gross national products of the rich members of the World Bank which would then amount to a little under $2,000 billion a year.

Independent African countries — the new government has nobody else qualified to send and, anyway, they could not afford a changeover.

But at least one African ambassador has felt the financial pinch of a coup back home. Quite recently the ambassador from Upper Volta, where the former president was deposed on January 4, is reported to have told a colleague that he had not received his salary for several weeks.

SPRING NOT FAR AWAY

Off-Again, On-Again Season Hits Island

By ELIZABETH FORBES

The boulevard maintenance man was perched in an Oriental plum tree, trimming the branches.

I was busy picking up some of the smaller twigs with the idea of bringing them to quick bloom in my living room.

The wind was blowing. Skies were grey. We were both huddled up in warm clothing.

"It's the off-again, on-again season," said the man in the tree. "One day it's sunny and you can feel spring in the air. Next day it's cold and wet. A person doesn't know what to wear."

I hadn't heard that expression "off-again, on-again season" for a good many years. As I sorted through the branches, it nudged at my memory, taking me back, farther and farther, until I was again a pinafored little girl.

Down the street from our home there was a cottage, painted creamy yellow. It had a verandah across the front that was filled with flowering plants during most of the year. There was a square of lawn edged with flowers and, out back, there was a vegetable garden, trim and neat and filled with good things to eat.

In that cottage lived an elderly woman who made the best cookies in the neighborhood. She wore gingham dresses and big white aprons. Her straight, grey hair was pulled back to a tiny knot on top of her head. Her face was wrinkled and spotted with faded freckles.

Her hands were a bit misshapen, a bit discolored and with soil particles worked permanently into the skin.

You see, her great love was her garden.

Looking back, I can visualize her now, feet protected in canvas goshes, a battered old hat on her head, busy digging and raking, sowing seeds, trimming rose bushes and thinning her vegetables in the proper season.

Our acquaintance grew as I followed her from flower bed to vegetables row, asking questions that I know now must have tried her patience on many an occasion.

Mid-afternoon she would always "down tools" for a short time. The battered hat came off, the straight hair was combed, the goshes were replaced by well-worn slippers and a clean apron went on.

Then she'd settle in a rocking chair on the verandah, for her cup of tea. Very often I sat on the steps below her, a glass of milk and a plate of cookies beside me.

It was this woman who used the expression "off-again, on-again" to describe the early spring season.

She'd stand on the verandah, eager to get her fingers into the soil but knowing that it was still too wet and soggy to work. She'd squint at the sky, turn her face to the wind and say, "not today, little one. It's off-again, on-again weather. Run along home."

As the boulevard maintenance man grumbled in the tree and I scrambled for well-budded branches on the ground, I could hear her voice and I could visualize her, in those far away days, waiting patiently, for spring to settle in.

Right now there are many women — and men, too — just as eager to get out in their gardens, to dig and to rake, to plant and to sow.

To them let me say, that regardless of chill winds and snow patches on the hills, spring is not far away.

You know it if you touch the earth where it is protected from the winds by rocks or thick grass. There's a subtle warmth rising from the ground.

You'll find it in the daffodil buds pushing toward the sky and in a whiff of perfume you encounter where wallflowers are beginning to show color and where the daphne is in bloom.

You are sure of it, if like me, you watch for the men pruning the boulevard trees and you bring the brown branches into the warmth of your living room. They burst into delicate pink blossoms overnight.

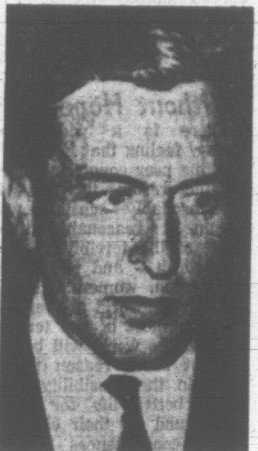

Despite the "off-again, on-again" weather, spring is in the air!

Anti-German Leaflets On Cars

AMSTERDAM (Reuters)

German-owned cars were plastered with anti-German leaflets overnight in this city, preparing for Thursday's wedding of Dutch Crown Princess Beatrix of former West German diplomat Claus Von Amberg.

The leaflets read: "Your presence here at the celebration of this wedding again reminds us of the more than 100,000 Amsterdam people who were murdered by the Germans during the last war."

Strict security precautions were taken for the event, with authorities anxious to avoid incidents because of a controversy over Von Amberg's service in the German Army during the war.

The organizers held a general wedding rehearsal this morning. The whole procession, including the golden coach to be used by the couple, went over the difficult drive through the narrow and winding streets and avenues along the canals that criss-cross the city.

All Schools Closed As Man. Digs Out

WINNIPEG (CP) — School children continued to enjoy an unscheduled vacation brought about by the big blizzard Friday while nearly all businesses were back to normal today from eastern Manitoba to the Lakehead.

All elementary high schools in the Greater Winnipeg area were closed today along with many schools in rural areas. But for most people in Winnipeg, it was a regular workday as snow plows cleared major thoroughfares and transit buses ran again.

An emergency committee appealed to all residents to leave their cars at home today because of lack of parking space in the downtown area. Hundreds of cars, buried in deep snow, were towed away Saturday and Sunday because they hampered snow-clearing operations.

Winds up to 70 miles an hour whipped up snowdrifts as high as 20 feet in some places as the blizzard swirled across an area of about 100,000 square miles Friday from eastern Manitoba to the Lakehead.

The storm was described as the worst in memory.

REPLENISH SUPPLIES

Winnipeg supermarkets had booming business Sunday as many residents went to replenish their food supplies.

Mayor Stephen Juba Sunday predicted the storm will cost Winnipeg $1,000,000 but hoped for financial aid from senior governments.

Some suburban areas were still snowbound. In the Greater Winnipeg city of St. James, snowdrifts piled as high as the roof tops. People dug tunnels to reach the streets.

Many doctors, unable to use their cars, were taken by power toboggans or police cruisers to emergency house calls.

There were 41 births reported Friday. One baby was delivered at a home by two policemen who realized they couldn't get the mother to hospital in time.

Four people died as a result of the blizzard, three from apparent heart attacks and a fourth from frostbite.

GOT PAPERS SUNDAY

The Free Press and The Tribune published Friday although their Greater Winnipeg distribution was limited to a few hundred. Friday's newspapers were delivered Saturday and Sunday, along with Saturday editions.

The Trans-Canada Highway was open although still snow-blown late Sunday between Winnipeg and Portage la Prairie, 50 miles to the west. From Kenora, Ont., to the Lakehead it still was not cleared to its full width.

SWEEPING out his home-made igloo is Patrick Henry of the Great Winnipeg city of St. James. Actually, the igloo was a tunnel, dug out from a snowdrift, which led from the Henry home to the street.

Pair Receives Facial Cuts

A young motorist and his female passenger received facial cuts in a collision at Poulson and Beckett Sunday afternoon.

Police said Steven Chater, 18, of 5171 Poulson, hit a parked car near the intersection.

His passenger was identified as Fawn Passmore, address unavailable.

'We're in Trouble With a Fast Thaw'

WINNIPEG (CP) — The danger of serious flooding in southern Manitoba has increased as a result of the blizzard that swept through the Red River Valley late last week.

Agriculture Minister George Hutton said Sunday the Red River will definitely rise higher than the 23-foot peak he had predicted a week ago. How much depends on the weather from now on.

Twenty-three feet is five feet above initial flood stage.

"The only thing that can keep the water down is an immediate warm spell and a slow runoff which will take a lot of the snow away," Mr. Hutton said.

"If we get a late spring and all this snow goes with a bang, we're in trouble."

City Council 'Too Slow' For Centre Aid

Victoria was too slow on a government offer to pay half the cost of a convention centre, Premier Bennett indicated Friday.

He was asked by Donald Smith, Victoria's MLA, whether any further consideration is being given to an offer several years ago by the government to pay half the cost if the city went ahead with the convention centre.

The offer was not accepted at that time. The premier said Victoria is well treated by the government, pointing out the new museum and money spent through the Capital Improvement District Commission.

Overflow in Schools Likely in September

Greater Victoria schools are full to capacity and about 1,250 more students are expected to enroll in them this fall.

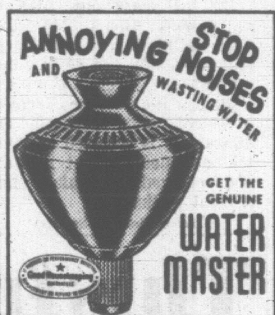

This is the principal reason for Saturday's school building referendum, a statement issued by the school board explained at the weekend.

The statement, issued by board chairman John Porteous, said the only solution to the problems of rising enrollment is to complete the school building program now started.

It urged ratepayers to approve the school referendum so that the work can be carried on. Mr. Porteous pointed out the cost of the program is only about $1.25 a year for the owner of the average house with a market value of $13,000.

Mr. Porteous also pointed out MORE BOOKS BOUGHT Canadian publishers sold about 18 per cent more books last year than in 1964.

that the longer the building program is delayed the more it will eventually cost. It was rising costs that necessitated this referendum to supplement funds approved in a referendum two years ago.

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

Grits Endorse Homeowner Aid

B.C. Liberals at their annual convention Saturday endorsed, for the first time, the principle of the homeowner grant.

Liberal MLAs have voted for the grant in the Legislature but the convention officially approved it for the first time in a resolution suggesting ways to reduce the tax burden on property owners.

The Grits seemed to think of almost everyone else, as well as property owners, in the raft of resolutions they approved at their annual convention.

They had something for the Indians, motorists, immigrants, workers displaced by automation, working mothers, juvenile delinquents, the sick and the aged.

They even suggested housewives should be made eligible for pensions.

The endorsement of the homeowner grant came in a resolution urging that basic school taxes no longer be levied on residential property.

EXTEND GRANTS

The resolution stated that "the Liberal party pledge itself to improve and extend the present system of 'Homeowner Grants' by removing this form of taxation."

But the motion was approved only after a vehement protest by Victoria lawyer David Hummel who said the party should not approve gimmicks such as a homeowner grant.

The Liberals also stated that health and welfare costs should be financed out of property taxes but be paid entirely by the province. A resolution said it is unfair to tax home owners when the services provided are for everyone. It suggested that having the province pick up the tab would result in a more equitable tax distribution.

PROPERTY TAXES

Municipal financing was the subject of one of the longest resolutions approved. It stated that the "glaring defect" of the present system of financing is that it comes mostly out of property taxes that do not necessarily reflect the property owner's ability to pay.

The resolution urged an independent inquiry to study the sharing of such costs as education, health and welfare programs between the province and municipalities.

The resolution on Indian affairs stated a greatly improved standard of education, medical care and incentives should be made available. It said this should be done whether Indians live on a reserve or not.

Delegates to the annual conference also agreed the provincial government should accept responsibility for providing adequate roads in downtown areas of the big cities. It said much traffic congestion in the cities is due to provincial road-building programs that funnel more traffic into the metropolitan centres.

MAJOR PROGRAM

A major program to help the aged — including provision of extensive housing at costs they can afford — was urged in a resolution on medical care.

This resolution said the Social Credit government has not kept its promise to use 40 per cent of the sales tax to finance health services and they are inadequate as a result.

Youth figured in a motion that stated child welfare services need to be reorganized in an attempt to prevent juvenile crime and provide rehabilitation for offenders.

The need to help working mothers or persons who are dependent on domestic help was underlined by a resolution asking that the cost of babysitting be reduced.

HEART FUND DRIVE HAS BEST YEAR EVER

The B.C. Heart Foundation fund drive in Greater Victoria has passed its objective of $35,000. "The money is still coming in and we are four days behind with our incoming mail," chairman Courtney Haddock said today.

"This is our best campaign yet. We have had a wonderful response from Up-Island as well as Victoria."

ELECTED president of the Young Progressive Conservatives was Del O'Brien, a 30-year-old Pembroke lawyer. The group held its annual meeting Sunday in Ottawa.

AFTER CONFERENCE

U.S. Controls Lack Definition

(Times News Services)

WASHINGTON—Canada and the U.S. ended two-day talks on the weekend without solving where Canada stands in relation to the voluntary investment squeeze the U.S. has asked 900 American-based companies to apply abroad.

all politics?

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission has agreed to reconsider regulations which Canada says would bring some Canadian firms under American law just because their stocks are purchased by Americans.

A communique and press conference reports Saturday by External Affairs Minister Paul Martin and U.S. States Secretary Dean Rusk created some uncertainty on the U.S. foreign investment guidelines, designed to end an international payments deficit.

Has Canada really been given special status under the U.S. program to trim direct investment, repatriate foreign earnings and expand exports?

Said the communique:

"Canadian ministers expressed their concern over the possible implication for Canada of the U.S. voluntary program on direct investment and the relationship of this program to the position of Canadian subsidiaries of U.S. corporations."

SAY NO NEW PRACTICE

"The U.S. members made it clear that the U.S. government was not requesting U.S. corporations to induce their Canadian subsidiaries to act in any way that differed from their normal business practices as regards the repatriation of earnings, purchasing and sales policy or their other financial and commercial activities."

"U.S. members re-emphasized their view that U.S. subsidiaries abroad should behave as good citizens of the country where they are located."

Martin branded this aspect of the talks resulting in American views that "meet the misgivings stated in Canada in various quarters."

Rusk said the talks were not concerned with problems that might arise with other countries but concentrated "on our very special and important relationship with Canada."

That theme was repeated as Rusk and Thomas Mann, Rusk's under-secretary for economic affairs, were pressed by reporters on where Canada stands in the voluntary investment-curb program and where the program stands.

Mann said the guidelines are flexible enough to let American subsidiaries abroad be good citizens although unnecessary retention of earnings abroad is not desirable.

FEARS ARE POLITICAL

Canada's fears on both its main complaints arise almost wholly from chronic concern about American influence and are more political than economic, it was assumed here.

For example, the Sunday New York Times said both the investment and the stock-sales issues "raised political difficulties in Ottawa, where the protection of 'sovereignty' against the U.S., particularly on economic matters, is always a source of heated debate."

U.S. Treasury Secretary Henry Fowler, who participated in the talks, recently branded Canadian debate about the U.S. investment guidelines both inside and outside Parliament as domestic political matter.

More generally in the talks, Canada and the U.S. said they see eye to eye on a great number of items, and Rusk, denying any major repair job is needed on the North American relationship.

Canada and the U.S. both felt progress needs to be made soon on the long-stalled U.S.-initiated Geneva round of talks aimed at cutting world tariffs.

DISCUSS LAKE POLLUTION

They made yards on Great Lakes pollution, they said, agreed on the need for more food aid to India, which Canada is going to increase, and on more efficient machinery for the international monetary system.

Shorter, wife of the vice-chairman of MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd., for whom the 356-foot barge was built. Looking on is John Wallace, general manager of Yarrows Ltd., builders of the craft. The Nanose Carrier will join her sister barge, Nootka Carrier, carrying 7,000-ton loads of newsprint between Port Alberni and Powell River and California points. A 140-foot barge, the Haida Brave, is being built in Halifax to haul the barges. Total cost of the three vessels is $3,750,000.

THIS IS THEIR WEEK

Consumers Seek Members

The 20,000-member Consumers' Association of Canada will observe this week as Consumer Week.

It is sponsoring a campaign to increase membership and broaden its services to consumers in every province.

"We shall support this campaign by attempting to double our local membership of 400," said Mrs. G. G. Brown, president of the Victoria branch.

"If we could double our strength across Canada, we would be a definite force in the control of prices and standards. As it is, we are able to give valuable information to purchasers in obtaining the best value for their dollars."

DISCRIMINATING

"Canadian consumers ought to be the most discriminating buyers in the world. We want to raise the standard of Canadian products and the standard of living across Canada."

Mrs. Brown said all Canadians are eligible for membership at $3 a year, which entitles them to six annual copies of the magazine, The Canadian Consumer.

"An important part of our work is the independent testing of household appliances. With a larger membership we could accomplish far more in this direction."

In official recognition of Consumer Week, Prime Minister Lester Pearson said:

"We in government appreciate and support the work done by the Consumers' Association."

FOR CANADIAN GOVERNMENT

Big Deficit Forecast

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Tax Foundation has predicted that the federal government will face a deficit of between $438,000,000 and $588,000,000 in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1967.

In its annual study of the outlook for the next federal budget—expected within a month—the foundation predicts revenues will rise by about $431,000,000 during the fiscal year, compared with the $500,000,000 apparently recorded during the present year. The increase, if achieved, would raise revenues in fiscal 1967 to $8,112,000,000.

The forecast says there are too many uncertain factors involved to arrive at a firm estimate of spending, but it puts outlays in the range of $8,550,000,000 to $8,700,000,000.

The lower range would be $80,000,000 more than the estimated figure for the present year, while the upper projection would be almost $1,000,000,000 more.

NO TAX FORECAST

The foundation is a non-profit organization sponsored by the Canadian Bar Association and the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants. Its annual outlook makes no attempt to predict possible tax changes.

The review says that although former finance minister Gordon forecast a deficit of $300,000,000 for this year in his budget last April 26, it now appears the deficit would be not more than $50,000,000.

"The minister has based his revenue prediction on a growth rate for gross national product of a little over seven per cent, but with the economy rocketing along at a better than nine-per cent rate, his revenue seems likely to register a $500,000,000 gain, $300,000,000 more than he had anticipated."

In its projection of revenues for fiscal 1967, the foundation used a GNP increase of eight per cent.

One major unknown factor the foundation comments on is a possible price increase of about three per cent, which it says could have a significant effect on revenues.

"If it triggers off restrictive measures either in Canada or the United States it would result in the failure of the economy to achieve the rate of real growth implicit in the GNP projection. This in turn would have serious effects on all the revenue forecasts."

Other imponderables mentioned include the effect on capital investment in Canada or the United States economic guidelines, the fighting in Viet Nam, possible substantial gains from the U.S.-Canada auto agreement and incentive programs to stimulate employment.

It expects the biggest revenue increases, to come from sales taxes—a gain of about $117,000,000.

New Fields Greener In Oil Hunt

CALGARY (CP)—The Herald predicts the Rainbow Lake field may be replaced "any day" as the common subject of conversation in the oil industry.

The newspaper says the field could be replaced by exploration areas such as Steen River, Cadotte River, Sawm Lake, Roe Creek and Bison Creek.

These areas are the object of present exploratory drilling and each can contribute to the new 240-mile Rainbow-Nipisi pipeline northwest of Edmonton, the paper says.

"It is not unusual for exploration to follow a pipeline, because the presence of oil or gas in at least the general area is the reason for the line's existence."

As well, new pipelines make new exploration areas more accessible, the paper says.

"There are approximately 35 drilling rigs in the area where oil discoveries would probably mean increased use of the Rainbow pipeline."

Thirty-three square miles of muskeg and bush in the Rainbow area was recently declared as an oil field by the Alberta Oil and Gas Conservation Board. First well information is expected to be released March 16.

ARMED FORCES ROUNDUP

Foreign Service Attaches
To Tour Naval Facilities

Some 25 foreign service attaches will tour Victoria's military installations later this year.

Although details of the visit are still secret, tentative plans call for the tour some time between Sept. 12 and 16.

It is expected the group will tour naval barracks at HMCS Naden, visit Work Point Barracks to see the 1st. battalion Queen's Own Rifles, and, as a sideline, make a trip to a Victoria lumber mill.

They will also visit heavy industries in Vancouver and tour the Canadian School of Military Engineering at Chilliwack.

At present, Sgt. Rogers is assistant instructor with the Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineer School's vehicle company at Kingston, Ont.

Commander Maurice A. Turner, commander of the destroyer-escort HMCS Saskatchewan for the past few years takes up a new assignment in the U.S. on Monday.

The veteran naval officer will be stationed in Norfolk, Virginia, on the planning and operational staff of the Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic, which controls maritime forces assigned to NATO for Atlantic operations.

COMMANDER TURNER

Sussexvale, FMO Victoria (United States cruise).

National defence minister Paul Hellyer, paid a whirlwind visit to this command Friday.

He was met at Pat Bay airport by rear-admiral M. G. Stirling, commander Maritime Pacific.

After informal talks, the group, including representatives of the Queen's Own Rifles and Esquimaux garrison, had lunch in the men's cafeteria at HMCS Naden.

In the afternoon Mr. Hellyer held discussions with Group Capt. D. B. Wurtele, commandant of Royal Roads.

The Maritime Command Pacific, along with naval establishments across the country, will observe Battle of the Atlantic May 1.

Special church services and other events will honor men of the Royal Navy and the merchant marine who lost their lives during the grim Atlantic fighting of the last world war.

Details and times of events will be announced later.

Some people still think electric heating is expensive.

LAWRENCE MORRISSEY, Victoria, B.C.
"No maintenance at all. We haven't had to touch it since it was installed. There's been no odour, either. The atmosphere is always clean and fresh."

MRS. G. BOUCHARD, Fort St. John, B.C.
"It's very even heat, with no cool spots, no drafts. I believe electricity is more reliable, too. When we leave the house, there's nothing to worry about."

D.A. PRIOR, Prince George, B.C.
"I like the low cost. We haven't spent a cent for repairs. And it doesn't need as much space, so it's ideal for a no-basement place like ours."

DEREK PARKES, Westbank, B.C.
"I like the thermostat in every room. You can keep the temperature just where you want it. No heat is wasted. We really like it."

MR. & MRS. R.G. STEWART, Ladner, B.C.
"What do we like best about electric heat? Cleanliness. Sure, it's quiet. Takes up less space, too. But most of all, it's the cleanest heat we've ever had."

F.W. STENNER, Gibsons, B.C.
"Complete comfort all through the house. The exact heat we want in each room, because each one is controlled by its own separate thermostat."

At today's low electric rates, over 9,000 B.C. families have learned that electric heating costs little more than ordinary automatic heating systems. But it offers plenty more: (1) Room-by-room temperature control means extra comfort, extra savings. (2) Sunshine-clean electric heat saves drudgery and expense. No dirt, no soot. (3) Equipment is practically maintenance-free. Usually lasts longer, too. (4) Electric heat is easy to live with. Gentle, even heat. Very quiet heat. (5) Compact, too. Simplifies home construction, saves valuable floor space. (6) Resale value? As the trend to all-electric living gains ground, this is the heating system more buyers will be looking for tomorrow. If you're about to build, remodel or extend your home, don't overlook the advantages of electric heating. Ask B.C. Hydro for a heating cost estimate, plus the informative booklet: "Electric Heating Facts." It's free.

FUJI WIND WARNING TOO LATE?

Four Nations Join Japan Crash Probes

TOKYO (AP) — Aviation experts from four countries began intensive investigations today following three successive air-line disasters in the Tokyo area that killed 321 persons.

Japanese officials also launched urgent studies of aviation safety in Japan and renewed calls for a new airport.

Heavy rains on the lower slopes of Mount Fuji, site of a British Overseas Airways Corp. crash Saturday that killed all 124 aboard, hampered studies being made of the twisted wreckage.

Photographs of the BOAC jet which spun out of a clear sky showed the plane began disintegrating while falling. Smoke trailed from the full length of both wings.

Pieces of the Canadian Pacific Airlines Douglas DC-8 jet that crashed Friday in a fog at Tokyo Airport were being picked over by more experts. That crash killed 64 of the 72 persons aboard.

On Feb. 4 a Boeing 727 jet operated by All Nippon Airways crashed in Tokyo Harbor and killed all 133 persons aboard. It was the worst crash in history involving a single plane.

Eighteen Canadian residents were among those who perished in the CPA crash. Theodore Vaskovich, 53, an engineer from Toronto was the only Canadian listed among the BOAC crash victims, who included 89 Americans. There were no Canadians in an earlier crash of the Boeing 727.

E. W. Ogden, general manager for the Far East for Canadian Pacific Airlines, told a press conference the company is considering the question of compensating for victims of the crash Friday.

In the meantime, Ogden said, CPA is giving 400,000 yen ($1,111) to the five Japanese victims as a voluntary condolence payment in accordance with Japanese custom.

The investigators arriving here were from Canada, the United States and Britain. John G. Adams, a member of the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board, said he would study the three crashes, all of which involved American-made jets.

Identification of the BOAC and CPA victims continued. Japanese authorities started hearings on the disasters. Testimony was heard from airline pilots and air controllers. Transportation Minister Torata Nakamura announced that Prime Minister Eisaku Sato had instructed him to speed up plans for a new airport.

The BOAC plane, bound for Hong Kong and London, flew past Mount Fuji because many of the passengers had expressed a desire to see the landmark. It was a clear day but warnings of high winds near the Fuji area were issued after the plane took off.

DISCOVER TWO PISTOLS

Two small-calibre pistols were discovered in the BOAC wreckage, but police expressed doubt they had anything to do with the crash. They were checking to see if the pistols had been declared with customs when the owner or owners entered Japan.

A U.S. Air Force C-130 Hercules transport ran off the runway at the Tachikawa base Sunday night and plunged into a rice field. None of the five men aboard was hurt.

Available information indicated weather conditions may have been partially to blame for the crashes Friday and Saturday.

FLAMING HOLOCAUST CAUSED BY HAIR SPRAY?

By JIM HOAGLAND
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A woman sprays her hair. The man sitting beside her lights a cigarette at the same moment. And in seconds the Viscount airliner on which they are riding bursts into a flaming holocaust.

Passengers panic as the blaze spreads through the cabin. Some pour into the cockpit and in their fear interfere with the crew trying to battle the fire. One man kneels out a window and leaps from the plane, 300 feet in the air. Then the plane crashes into a Tennessee hillside and explodes.

WHAT HAPPENED
This is the picture United Airlines paints in a report submitted to the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) as to what may have happened just before one of its planes crashed July 9, 1964. The crash killed all 38 persons aboard.

The strongly worded report rejects the theory that CAB investigators are reported to be advancing — that the fire was started by an electrical fault in the plane's hold and spread into the cabin.

The agency's bureau of safety will make its final report "within several weeks," according to an agency official, who would not comment on the report.

The United report says the fire started in the cabin of the Viscount, which took off from Philadelphia and stopped at Washington on its way to Knoxville, Tenn. The document pinpoints the cause of fire as combustion of a liquid hydrocarbon that was probably carried aboard by a passenger.

Such highly combustible fluid is not normally found in the plane's cabin.

THEORIES
Although a United spokesman was careful to point out that "no one will ever really know" what happened just before the crash, he said the airline felt that combustion of hair spray or lighter fluid, both of which contain hydrocarbon, was one of the most plausible theories.

Flash burns and soot, which the airline says were caused by the burning of a liquid hydrocarbon, were found on the body of the man who jumped from the plane two miles from the crash site.

The airline bases its argument primarily on this and its contention that the pilot, who could not radio because radio systems were damaged or because he was too busy fighting the terrified passengers and fire, took measures to fight a fire in the cabin, rather than in the hold.

COSTLY CHANGES?

United fears that if CAB accepts the electrical fire theory, it will require costly and, from the airline's point of view, unnecessary modifications to the Viscounts. Similar electrical problems with the Constellation caused that aircraft to be grounded in 1946. United emphasizes that the Viscount was specifically engineered to avoid such electrical problems and says the plane has flown six million miles without any incident involving such a fire.

Uvic Students Selected For Africa Trip

Two University of Victoria students have been selected to take part in this year's Operation Crossroads Africa, a project of the United Church of Canada.

HOME GARDEN

'Instant' Beauty With Little Effort

By HILDA BEASTALL

Today we demand "instant" gardens which are labor-saving yet satisfying in appearance.

A difficult assignment to fill, yet thought-provoking.

Many persons who wish for such a garden make a beginning by taking down existing trees, having the lot made level to the house walls, and then start the landscaping.

When a property has trees, either native or cultivated, it is a wise course labor out of much of this rough clearing, and rough grasses can be kept under control easily with its aid. It is surprising how attractive field grasses are when cut occasionally during the season.

If trees are missing, plant your selected specimens as soon as a decision is made. They can be growing while the clean-up work is in progress.

Certain plants can be used for interest during the growing period of the trees. Later, as shade develops in the area and the character of the garden changes, they can be relinquished without regrets.

If the garden is small, choose light airy trees, remembering that they will be comparatively near the house. Many solidly evergreen trees would be out of scale, but one alone, as background for deciduous (leaf-losing) flowering trees would lend the air of permanence so necessary to home surroundings.

A judicious cutting out of what is obviously dead, woody material, will make it possible to see and assess the value of each and every plant that remains.

Leafs Take A Good One 'For Road'

Seattle 2, Victoria 6
By DOUG PEDEEN

"That one Saturday was a good one for the road," coach Frank Mario was saying at Memorial Arena this morning while sending Victoria Maple Leafs through a brisk workout.

"It showed we are coming out of our slump and I'll be disappointed if we don't win four of our eight games."

Those were perhaps brave words for a Western Hockey League coach about to take his club on an eight-game road trip that includes six interlocking games in a rugged tour of American League cities.

JOHN HENDERSON
... may join Leafs

However, Frank saw a lot he liked at the arena Saturday when the Leafs twice hustled from behind and then bombed Seattle Totems with four second-period goals in less than four minutes. The explosion ended the scoring and the Leafs settled for a 6-2 triumph to climb within five points of first-place Portland Buckaroos, 5-4 losers in overtime Saturday night in San Francisco.

"It was a good team effort," continued Mario. "Our defence looked better once our wingers started skating with the first 10 minutes."

"Parenteau played well and that means we should have a solid third line. I'll be able to keep our other two lines intact. "If this club keeps skating like it did Saturday, we're going to win some of those road games. When we set the pace we control the game."

GETS BIG GOAL

Dave Parenteau is the rookie centre who got a chance for regular work when Larry Keenan suffered a wrist fracture last week. He appeared right at home and he fired a big goal for the Leafs when he evened the score at 2-2 late in the first period.

After five minutes of the second session, school was out for the Totems.

In the space of three minutes and 25 seconds, Aut Erickson, Bob Barlow, Lou Jankowski and Gordie Redahl had rapped shots behind bewildered Seattle goalie Jim McLeod and the Leafs never faltered the rest of the way. They even held the Totems to one direct shot on rookie goalie Gary Holland while playing two men short for a minute and 42 seconds later in the second session.

Barlow also connected in the first period and his evening's work gave him 30 goals, making it four successive seasons he has scored 30 or more.

WHO NEEDS GOYLE?

The second tally was an important one for the winger who came to the Leafs from Seattle last summer amid hints that his production would drop with separation from Totem centre Guy Fleider.

"That makes it 20," commented Barlow. "One more and I'll have one more than I got with Fleider last year. That should keep them quiet in Seattle."

It turned out to be a completely unhappy weekend for the Totems, who returned home Sunday and dropped a 2-1 overtime loss in an interlocking game with Baltimore Clippers.

Leafs leave here Tuesday and open their road schedule Wednesday in San Francisco, where Mario will ease one of his problems. Veteran John Henderson, stand-by goalie for the Leafs, is expected to join the team for the balance of the season, filling the vacancy caused by the departure of Al Miller.

Miller has an even record in three games with the Oilers one loss, one tie and a 7-4 win Sunday night over St. Louis.

Leafs return home on March 23 for a game against the third-place Vancouver Canucks, a club the Victorians now lead by 11 points.

If they win four of their eight, they won't have to worry about the Canucks. And they might have a chance to catch the Bucks.

Castoff Haunts Totems

By The Canadian Press

One of hockey's oldest axioms — "they always come back to haunt you" — was forcibly driven home to the Seattle Totems Sunday.

The villain of the piece, as far as Seattle fans are concerned, was a player who left the Western Hockey League club after last season.

Jean Marie Cossette, a Totem for two seasons, scored one goal and assisted on the other Sunday as Baltimore Clippers of the American League won an overtime interlocking game 2-1 in Seattle.

San Francisco Seals edged Portland Buckaroos 5-4 in overtime Saturday at San Francisco. Cossette gave Baltimore a 1-0 lead in the second period with his 21st goal of the season. He assisted on Ron Ingram's winner at 39 seconds of the sudden-death overtime when he dropped a pass from in front of the net to Ingram on the point.

Len Haley scored the Totems' lone marker.

Wayne Connelly ended the San Francisco-Portland overtime duel with a tip-in at 3:45 of the sudden-death period. It was his 33rd goal of the year.

Portland came from behind four times in regulation play.

Curling's Elite Opens Play for Brier Trophy

HALIFAX (CP)—Teams from all provinces—two from Ontario—launched one of Canada's major sports spectacles today as 11 rinks began play in the Canadian curling championships.

Forty of the 44 curlers participating in the 37th edition of the annual play for the Brier Trophy at the Halifax Forum today.

Hersh Lerner's Manitoba rink from Winnipeg drew the opening-round bye.

Good crowds were expected at the 7,000-seat Forum through the five-day round-robin tournament.

Don Oyle's Kentville, N.S., crew gave Halifaxians plenty to cheer about when the tournament was last held here in 1951 as they swept to the province's second title since the whole affair started in 1927 with a perfect 10-0 record. But Nova Scotia has been able to break even in only two of the last six years.

Manitoba has won 16 championships in 36 years, but Saskatchewan has held the edge in the last seven with all five of its victories, beginning with Garnet Campbell's 1955 triumph at Regina.

Saskatchewan, skipped by Bob Pickering, is a favorite this year with 23 years' experience in national competition among the four members. Campbell and his brother Glen are back in harness, bringing to mind the 1955 Avenue team of four Campbell brothers.

Juniors, whose tallest player is a mere five-nine, hope to carry their campaign against the height premise one step further this week when they bid for the Canadian junior crown at the University of Victoria gymnasium.

They will be one of five teams bidding for the crown in a round-robin tournament that opens tonight. Vancouver, Marpole, Montreal, Edmonton's University of Alberta Pandas and Victoria Vikesites round out the tournament roster.

"We are not a tall team," agrees coach Earl Begg. "We

Toronto's Gardens Set To Offer Clay-Terrell

TORONTO (CP)—The world heavyweight championship fight between Cassius Clay and Ernie Terrell staggered into Toronto Sunday and found a haven.

Harold Ballard, executive vice-president of Maple Leaf Gardens, announced Sunday night the fight will be held in his building March 29.

The reaction was mixed. In Pleasantville, N.J., Terrell said he couldn't care less. "I won't believe it until I see Clay in the same ring with me," said the World Boxing Association champion.

The fight has already been run out of New York and Chicago and last week couldn't get into Montreal or its suburb, Verdun, Que. After Montreal rejected it, places like Huron, N.H., and Cobourg, Ont., loomed as prospective sites.

But Ballard, with an arena capable of seating 18,000 for boxing, met Saturday with Robert Arum, a New York lawyer representing Main Bout Inc., which controls closed-circuit television rights for the bout. By Sunday night he was able to announce that contracts for the 15-round were to be signed at noon today.

But there were one or two details to be cleared up first.

WILL MEET ROWNTREE
Merv McKenzie of Toronto, Ontario athletic commissioner, said Sunday night he wanted to consult Ontario Labor Minister Leslie Rowntree today before the contract signing. The athletic commission comes under the minister's jurisdiction.

"Normally I don't always seek certification from Mr. Rowntree," McKenzie said, "but I owe him the courtesy this time on two counts."

"In the first place, this is a world championship bout. I also want to clear up whatever political overtones the government might be sensitive to concerning Clay."

McKenzie's reference was to remarks made by Clay opposing the United States' role in the war in Viet Nam. The Louisville Lip, widely regarded as the champ since his victories over former titlist Sonny Liston, is scheduled to go into the U.S. armed services soon.

But McKenzie and Ballard did not think the remarks by Clay, a Black Muslim, bothered Canadians as much as Americans.

rely on positional play and speed."

Begg's tallest player, Chris Brass, isn't even a starter and he flaunts tradition by starting one of his shorter players, Wendy Connors.

"She isn't a big scorer, but she is the key to our defence," Begg explains.

Hamilton boasts a record of 13 wins and five losses. Three of the wins came in the round-robin Ontario playdowns against Toronto Aura and London Orphans. The rest were recorded in the Hamilton and District Senior Ladies' League.

Vikesites, the defending champions, will be on the sidelines with a bye when first-round action gets under way tonight.

In the opening game, at 7:30, Montreal meets the Pandas while Hamilton faces Marpole at 9:30.

Hourigans Fuss, Referee Jostled, Game Called Off

Hourigan's Kickers kicked up a fuss at Heywood Avenue Park Sunday and never got around to finishing their Victoria and District Soccer League match with Canadian Scottish.

Referee George Steele declared the match abandoned early in the second half while Kickers continued a lengthy protest and ignored a warning to line up for mid-field kick-off. Hourigans, the first division leaders, who had taken a 1-0 lead in the opening half, started hollering after the Scots had made it 1-1 on a play started by a cross from the left wing. Kickers' goalie pushed the ball wide of the net toward the end line, where it was retrieved by a Scottish forward just as it reached the line. It was passed in front of the goal and tapped into the net. Hourigan's, supported by their linesman, claimed the ball had crossed the line and charged toward Steele to protest. Steele ruled the ball had

League Awaiting Steele's Report

League officials have declined comment until they have time to study Steele's report.

Gorge Molsons took advantage of the situation to move within two points of Kickers. Gorge defeated Navy 2-1 at Naden on goals by Chummy Crabbe and Bill Hope, who scored the winner on a penalty shot. Dan Lawson had sent Navy into a 1-0 lead at the half. Luckies broke a three-place tie with Scottish by playing to a scoreless draw with Victoria West.

In the second division, Esquimalt kept its unbeaten record intact, but had a close escape before settling for a 1-1 draw with the Wests. Herb Frampton counted for Esquimalt and John Nather scored for Wests.

Fleet Forwards Beat Mariners In Field Hockey

Outstanding defensive work by Ruth Trewalby wasn't enough Saturday to prevent Mariners from dropping a 3-1 decision to Cowichan in a Vancouver Island Ladies' Field Hockey Association match.

Canadian international player Barbara Brown sparked the fast Cowichan forward line.

Two goals, each by Ann Stainbridge and Nancy Hill enabled Greyhounds to finish with a 4-4 draw against Uvic Vagabonds.

Right backs Gillian Reece of Cowichan and Janet Harris of Mariners were standouts as Mariners' "B" clipped Cowichan "B" 4-2.

In another match, Uvic Valkyries blanked Greyhounds "B" 8-0.

Toronto Maple Leafs are making a stretch drive toward the National Hockey League championship with substitute netminders.

The Leafs were hit hard in the netminding department recently when veterans Johnny Bowker and Terry Sawchuk suffered injuries.

Gary Smith was called up from the Rochester Americans of the American League and he did a solid job until he too was injured.

Then the Leafs called in Bruce Gamble from Tulsa of the Central League and the veteran netminder has turned in a magnificent performance in the four games he has played.

Gamble registered his second consecutive shutout Saturday night as the Leafs stopped Chicago Black Hawks and Bobby Hull 5-0. In Saturday's only other game, Montreal Canadiens whalloped Detroit Red Wings 7-2.

BLANKED SUNDAY TOO

Hull and the Hawks were shut out again Sunday night as Montreal blanked them 1-0. In Sunday's other action, Toronto downed Boston Bruins 5-3 and Detroit and New York Rangers fought to a 1-1 tie.

Gamble turned aside 33 shots Saturday night as he kept Hull from scoring his fifth goal of the season.

Hull, who shares the record of 50 goals in a season with Maurice Richard and Bernie Geoffrion, two former Montreal stars, had six shots on goal in the game but was unable to crack the armor of the stocky Gamble.

STRING BROKEN

Gamble had his spectacular shutout string ended, after a stretch of 171 minutes and 55 seconds when he surrendered goals to John McKenzie, his 14th, and Tom Williams, his 15th, six seconds apart Sunday night.

Hull was shut out for the second straight game as the Canadiens rode Claude Larose's second-period goal to their victory over the Hawks Sunday night. Hull had five shots on netminder Lorne Worsley.

Hall played the entire game Sunday night and tied a superb job as the Canadiens pummeled him with 35 shots.

Saturday's victory was costly for the Canadiens as they lost the services of star defenceman Jacques Laperriere for the remainder of the season. He suffered torn knee ligaments when he collided with Gadsby.

Defenceman Jean-Guy Talbot and the classy Richard also suffered injuries to their left legs and both are expected to be sidelined for about a week.

Dean Prentice's goal in the opening minute of the third period earned the Red Wings their tie with the Rangers Sunday.

Earl Ingarfield, had given the Rangers a 1-0 lead that stood up until Prentice's marker.

IKIe MacKAY gets winner

United Wields Hot Hand To Cool Off Firemen 1-0

VANCOUVER—Victoria United pulled the shocker of the Pacific Coast Soccer League season here Sunday, shattering the long unbeaten string of Vancouver Firefighters by blanking the league leaders 1-0.

Rookie centre-forward Ike MacKay torpede the Smokies when he scored the only goal of the exciting match at 21 minutes of the second half. MacKay drove a low shot past goalie Ken Pears after taking a free-kick pass from Dave Stothard. Until Sunday, Firefighters had marched undefeated through 15 league matches and they had finished last season with a skein of victories on their way to the Canadian crown.

Perhaps the victory for fifth-place United should not have been entirely unexpected. The Firefighters have given the Smokies more trouble than any other club in the current campaign and are now even with the leaders in three matches.

In two tussles at Victoria, Firefighters played to a 1-1 draw and came from behind in the final 10 minutes for a 2-1 victory, getting the winner with only 40 seconds remaining.

4-2-4 SYSTEM.

Victoria coach Frank Grealy returned Sunday to his system of playing four forwards, four backs and two men on the halfback line and again the style bothered the Firemen.

Stothard, playing his finest game of the season, and Bill Hamilton handled the halfback spots and gave the potent Firefighter duo of Art Hughes and Jim Blundell few scoring chances in the fast match.

However, Blundell and Hughes each forced Victoria goalie Barry Sadler into making a spectacular save to preserve his shutout. Sadler's greatest save came at 40 minutes of the first half when he made a diving stop against Bob Babcock.

PEARS SOLID, TOO.

With all starters playing the full game, all the Victorians made worthy contributions to a team effort that gave United a slight edge in play over the route.

Pears also turned in a brilliant game and was fortunate in the early stages, when MacKay and Tom Locke barely missed the net with Pears beaten.

Victory kept alive Victoria's hopes for the fourth, and last, playoff spot. United is now two points back of Burnaby Villa and three behind third-place UBC Thunderbirds.

Burnaby gained ground Saturday by nipping North Shore 2-1 while Thunderbirds were being held to a 1-1 deadlock by lowly St. Andrews.

CHESSE RESULTS

Results of games played last week in the city and Victoria Chess Club championships:

City championship—Seedhouse 1, Iggs 0; Birch 1, Henderson 0; Lane 2, Strydom 0; Sheard 1, Bennett 0; Hase 1, Hobson 1.

Club tournament: Woodcock 1, Dahlman 0; Schumacher 1, Stephenson 0.

KNUDSON TOTALS 213

George Knudson of Toronto shot his second straight 73 for 213. Bill Ezinicki, the Winnipeg-born former National Hockey League who now plays out of New England, was four strokes further back.

Sanders leveled a blast at the PGA for its loose handling of tournament procedures.

"It's true I pulled a blunder by not signing my card, but how big a sin is that?" Sanders said. "I checked my card three times to make sure I had the right score. It seems we should be responsible only for the final score."

"I had played the back nine first and finished on No. 9. There was no official tent or table to go to hand in my card. Somebody grabbed it. People were yelling, photographers were snapping pictures, kids were asking for autographs, and they were telling me I should rush to the press room."

"Under these conditions, how could anybody keep a sane head on his shoulders?"

FRESNO GROUP PLANS BID FOR WHL BERTH

FRESNO, Calif. (AP)—A group of businessmen have announced they will make a bid for a Western Hockey League franchise for Fresno next season.

The group, from Fresno and Los Angeles, voted to form a $100,000 corporation at a meeting in Fresno. They said they would contact Al Leader of Seattle, president of the WHL, early this week and are prepared to offer him a cheque for $7,500, the price of a franchise.

Construction of a 5,600 seat convention centre and sports arena—capable of housing hockey facilities—is presently under way in Fresno. It is expected to be completed by next fall.

Tide Hopes Climb With 17-5 Victory

Is this the year when rugby's historic McKechnie Cup will return to Victoria?

Few rugby observers gave Victoria Crimson Tide more than a longshot chance to wrest the silverware away from Mainland sides before the annual inter-city competition opened Saturday.

Today they are looking at the Tide with greater respect after the Victorians made stamina, alertness and experience pay off for a 17-5 triumph over Vancouver Norwests Saturday in a semifinal match at Macdonald Park.

Victory sends Victoria into the cup final at Vancouver against the winner of the other semifinal between University of B.C. Thunderbirds and Vancouver Reps.

Held to a scoreless draw in the opening half Saturday, the Tide overpowered Norwests after the intermission and erupted for 17 points before stand-off John Narbrett scored the Norwest points with a try and conversion in the final five minutes.

BURGESS SPARKLES

Veteran fullback Don Burgess started Victoria on its way with a penalty goal about 10 minutes into the second half and then dashed from his position to give the Tide an extra ball-handler on the three-quarter line on two scoring plays.

Three minutes after the penalty goal, wing Jim Ryan finished a good run from his own territory with a kick to touch near the Norwest line.

Tide forwards got the ball to their backs and Burgess moved up to provide the pass that sent Tom Bourne over for an unconverted try.

Burgess played a similar role about 10 minutes later and centre Dave Clarke carried the ball over for a try, which Burgess converted to make the score 11-0.

Ryan, one of the game's standouts, kept the Tide rolling with a fine individual effort. Ryan gathered in a kick and answered 40 yards down the sideline for an unconverted try.

Forward Gudman Gudman finished the Victoria scoring with another unconverted try before Narbrett saved Norwests from a shutout defeat.

In junior "A" action, Victoria beat Norwests, 6-3, and Victoria won a junior "B" game, 11-5.

NORWESTS—Fullback: Reg. Watson; Wings: John Langley, George Zarnoch; Centres: Eric Lilley, Mike Carbury; Standoff: Tom Brown, Scott Half; Backs: Eddie, Forward: Norm Stranahan, Sam Greening, Brian Goodwin, Ross Alderhead, Joe Milligan, Terry Dunkin, Vern Lettles, Dave Milne, CRISMON TIDE—Fullback: Don Burgess; Wings: Jim Ryan, Tom Bourne; Centres: Dave Clark, Harry Short; Standoff: Tom Brown, Scott Half; Ed Kubek; Forward: Bob Coates, Dave Priest, Norm Dixon, Gudman Gudman, Bill Ross, Ivar Ford, Robert Iversen, Don Eckhardt.

Boldnesian held off a second-effort drive by Saber Mountain and won the $141,900 Santa Anita Derby at Arcadia, Calif., Saturday.

The Kentucky-bred son of Bold Ruler was given a skilful ride by Walter Blum to get under the wire two lengths ahead of Saber Mountain, with Exhibitionist third.

The winner, who picked up $36,800 for his owner, William Haggin Perry, has not been nominated for either the Kentucky Derby or the Preakness, the first two gems in horse racing's triple crown for three-year-olds.

The favored Saber Mountain, unbeaten in five straight races before this 29th running of the Derby, had to settle for $20,000.

Perry said that at the time Kentucky Derby nominations closed he didn't think Boldnesian good enough.

The time for the 1 1/4-mile race was 1:48 2/5, well off the Derby record of 1:47 flat set last year by Lucky Debonair.

SETS TRACK RECORD
 At New Orleans, Just About, a four-year-old from Florida, captured the 39th running of the $77,000 New Orleans Handicap, setting a track record.

Just About clocked 1:48 4/5 for the 1 1/4 miles. It was almost one second faster than the old standard of 1:49 2/5 set in 1959 by Master Paylynn.

Wide to Right, a much-improved four-year-old won the $25,000-added City of Baltimore Handicap at Pimlico.

Wide to Right won by 2 1/4 lengths from Double Warrant, which was a neck ahead of Navy Admiral.

At Miami's Gulf Stream Park, Bold and Brave easily won the $18,625 Hutcheson Stakes by 1 1/4 lengths over Kauai King.

'Golden Boy' Edges Vegas
 EDMONTON—Tim Sillitoe, an awkwardly-effective Edmonton welterweight, squeezed out a narrow decision over Les Vegas of Victoria in the semifinals of the 139-pound division and went on to take Golden Boy honors in the annual Alberta Golden Gloves boxing tournament.

Sillitoe, 19, easily won the final Saturday on a third-round technical knockout over Vancouver's Steve Tohill.

Frank Scott (112 pounds), Vancouver; Leo Chabot (119), Kimberley, and Ron Wilson (165), Vancouver, were among the open champions.

Glamorize your home with convenience

Of all the things you can do to improve your home, nothing adds so much for so little as a colored extension telephone. It saves you thousands of steps a year, gives you privacy when required, brings that glamorous modern note to any room in your house. And the cost is only a few pennies per day!

AN-EXTENSION FOR-YOUR TEENAGER can bring important fringe benefits for you, too! Teenagers being the talkingest people in the world, you solve at one stroke the problem of having to listen to them endlessly. Also, teenagers save you a lot of steps by answering the phone automatically, every single time it rings. A well-mannered teen is almost as good as having a butler to take your calls!

BUSY MOTHERS, BABIES AND KITCHENS
 go together naturally with a Speakerphone extension. At the flick of a switch your hands become free again—you listen over the compact loudspeaker and talk back over the sensitive microphone. Meanwhile, carry on giving Junior his formula, preparing the dinner or mixing the cake. In fact, the Speakerphone makes kitchen calls a piece of cake every time!

HOBBY SHOP PROJECTS are a demanding and often intricate affair which should never, NEVER be interrupted! There is only one way to assure maximum concentration in today's busy rush of events—another extension phone within easy reach. No more rushing upstairs or into another room when the phone rings. Take the call the modern way, and still concentrate on that important work-bench project. Find out more about these glamorous low-cost home aids TODAY, without obligation, from your B.C. Big Welcome Awaits Ferry

An armada of 500 vessels will welcome the Queen of Prince Rupert when she completes her maiden voyage May 22 from Kelsey Bay to Prince Rupert.

The almost-completed vessel will inaugurate the first ferry service between Vancouver Island and the northern B.C. port of Prince Rupert.

And the celebrations will suit the occasion.

Among the vessels waiting to welcome the Rupert and her complement of dignitaries will be the destroyer-escort HMCS Yukon; the U.S. coast guard cutter Klaskanin from Seattle; an Alaska ferry; department of transport and fisheries vessels and Canadian mounted police launches.

In addition, the city's many private craft will turn out en masse for the occasion.

RIBBON-CUTTING

Once the ferry is docked, there will be a ribbon-cutting ceremony followed by a fly past of RCAF planes.

Invited guests will then be taken to their hotels followed by a noon luncheon.

Starting 2 p.m., guests will be taken on individual tours of the city.

A slap-up sea-food banquet has been laid on for the evening at which some 600 guests will be present.

The memorable day will end with a fireworks display.

Among invited guests for the maiden voyage are Premier W. A. C. Bennett, Lieutenant-governor George Pearkes, the entire B.C. cabinet, Alberta's minister of industry and development, A. R. Patrick, the governor of Alaska, W. A. Egan, several Alaskan commissioners and two senators from Washington.

As the historic sailing draws near, the B.C. government has received a congratulatory message from President Lyndon B. Johnson.

The message says: "The event will be a truly historic occasion and the U.S. government takes great pleasure in welcoming this completion of the final link in the marine highway along the Canadian coast between the state of Alaska and the state of Washington."

"Inauguration of this modern service is a significant step forward in facilitating traffic and tourism which will prove of immense advantage to citizens of both our countries."

maler, Mrs. Ian Jones, Mrs. Robert Large, Mrs. Steve Grandison, Mrs. Alex Brown, Mrs. Donald Pitt, Mrs. William Kenyon, and area captain Mrs. Art Jones. Their target—$7,000. Lending a little hand is toddler Mark Evans.

ISLAND ROUNDUP

Boat Mystery Unsolved

Search for the skipper of a fishing boat washed ashore on Vancouver Island's northeast coast Saturday swung to Vancouver today.

Police believe the skipper, James E. Sullivan, somehow managed to make shore when his 24-foot craft got into difficulties.

But instead of reporting the trouble he caught the first plane from Port Hardy to Vancouver. This conclusion was reached after it was discovered a man who took a plane to Vancouver at the weekend had the same name as was tagged to various articles aboard the boat.

The man left Port Hardy alone Friday, saying he was sailing around Vancouver Island.

U.S. authorities were also asked to investigate after several letters were found aboard the boat bearing Seattle addresses.

Air-sea rescue said winds blew up to 60 miles an hour in the area over the weekend. There was substantial water damage to the inside of the boat.

COURTENAY — Bessie Bridges proved Friday that you don't need a gun to clobber a cougar.

Out for a stroll, Bessie came upon an 175-pound cougar sleeping peacefully beside the remains of two deer he had killed. Bessie didn't know whether to return home and arm himself or just walk away.

Instead he crept up, wielding a steel pole he'd been carrying, and clubbed the cat-napper over the head.

One blow did the trick and now Mr. Bridges is thinking of having the skin tanned.

NANAIMO (CP) — An official request for a regional college plebiscite will be sent by the college co-ordinating committee to Education Minister Peterson. Nine school boards north of Malahat have taken part in the college study and passed bylaws supporting the plan.

DUNCAN — At the annual dinner of Duncan city volunteer fire department Saturday, Norman Griffiths and Alan Soderquist each received presentations in recognition of 25 years service.

City council congratulations were extended by Mayor Jack Dobson who was accompanied by fire wardens, Ald. Robert Mason and James Saunders. Fire chief George Sanderson commented favorably on the acquisition of a new $25,000 fire truck.

The new truck, a replacement, is capable of pumping 840 gallons a minute.

The city now owns two trucks.

DUNCAN — Cowichan Indian band has voted to spend $10,000 to extend city water to reserve homes.

This news was announced at the weekend by band secretary Louise Underwood.

Miss Underwood also stated the band council had approved a permanent easement of Boys Road to North Cowichan.

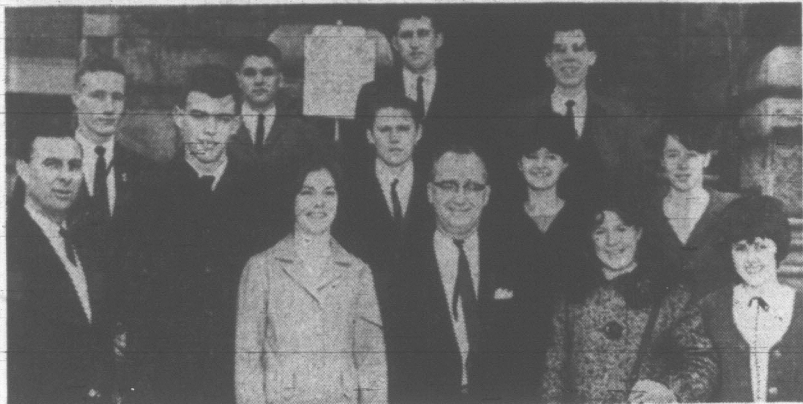

This will give public use of the road which will be maintained by the municipality.

Abner Thorne, Dennis Alphonse and Miss Underwood have been appointed band representatives to meet with Duncan city council to discuss "matters common to both councils."

At a recent public joint meeting it was evident the councils were at loggerheads on the question of the city buying reserve land for parking.

The Last Battle

Published for the first time anywhere, here at last is the untold story of Hitler's final defeat—by Cornelius Ryan, author of The Longest Day. In March Reader's Digest is the first of three parts of this dramatic chronicle. Filled with new information, this insight into Berlin in the grip of panic is destined to become a best seller—a new classic in the literature of World War II. Don't miss the March Reader's Digest.

AT CAPE SCOTT

Danish Community Disappeared

CAPE SCOTT, B.C. (CP)—On the unprotected northern tip of Vancouver Island, the empty houses of Cape Scott lie bleak beside the Pacific.

Three families — lighthouse keepers and their wives and children — live here now.

But 40 years ago 800 people lived here, farmed and fished, built a community hall and danced in it to the distinctive wail of the Scandinavian fiddle.

Danish pioneers labored here for two generations, started a sawmill, a store, a post office, a telegraph office, a newspaper and a small boat mooring.

Wild cattle roam the area today. Rusty harness gear hangs on tottering walls, and the hand-hewn bridges lead nowhere.

N. P. Jensen, a Danish fisherman, sailed up the west coast of Vancouver Island in 1896, and found the hay meadows at the head of a deep lagoon about four miles south of Cape Scott.

Another Dane, Rasmus Hansen, led the first settlers to the site, and the settlement began to grow.

The idea, apparently, was to live from fishing and trapping until crops matured and a road was built to Cape Scott—and the settlers seemed to have been convinced that a road was coming.

ROAD CAME TOO LATE

Their crops—small fruits and vegetables—were prolific, and largely consumed locally. Without a road, there was no ready way to take them to market.

Home-made fishing boats were no match for the Pacific gales that regularly flail the cape, they found. Trapping was profitable, but the pelts had to be carried out to Port Hardy 50 miles over foot trails.

There was no doubt about the richness of the area. About 40 years ago, surveyor H. H. Browne reported to the B.C. legislature that no other area in the province could produce such yields of vegetables and small fruits.

But it took a war to get the all-important road built, and by then it was too late.

A radar base was established at Cape Scott during the Second World War, and a plank road was constructed from Cape Scott to the RCAF base at Holberg, about 20 miles south.

But the settlement had fallen in on itself by then. Families left for more hospitable climes, more accessible locations.

Ships Ready for Island Travellers

Where do all the ferries go when winter schedules reduce the number of ships plying between Vancouver Island and the mainland? Why, they go to a winter ferryland of course. There they are refitted and repainted, tuned up and newly equipped and their crews get courses in life boat drill and rescue techniques. The 22 ships take turns resting here at Deas Docks, near the mouth of the Fraser. Come April, again sleek and shining, the whole fleet will be servicing travellers to and from the Island and Sunshine Coast. The busy scene can only be glimpsed by aircraft.

FERRIES RECRUITING IN ENGLAND

B.C. Government Ferry Authority is trying to recruit marine engineers in Britain, it was revealed today.

Ronald Worley, assistant general manager of the Authority, confirmed a report that the drive is under way to help fill gaps in the staff.

He said there were insufficient marine engineers in this area and the Authority has sent W. E. Weston, in charge of ferry operations, to England to hire an undisclosed number.

Salmon Bootleggers Rapped by Troller At Fishing Hearing

A Sidney troller today told MILAs that "game hog" sports fishermen sell their catches as a bootleg operation during closure periods affecting commercial fishermen.

The accusation was made by Richard Larson, an independent fisherman living in Sidney, who appeared before a special legislative committee inquiring into the fishing industry.

Mr. Larson said commercial fishermen are policed closely to ensure they observe the closures but any sports fisherman can sell his catch by obtaining a licence at nominal cost.

"I have no quarrel with the true sportsman but there is a lot who should be called game hogs," he said.

He also told the committee which is looking into a suggestion that licences be required for salt water sport fishing, particularly by Americans — that many U.S. yachtsmen reap a fishing bonanza on the west coast of Vancouver Island and take home as much as 700 pounds of salmon.

"I have talked to a Yank who stated he really enjoyed his visit to our country as he and one other man on his yacht had caught 67 coho and chinook salmon in two days at Stewart Island," he said.

He added that the visitor told him the trip hardly cost him anything as he had a diesel engine enabling him to fuel and provision in Seattle for the foray deep into Canadian fishing waters.

Mr. Larson also criticized local sports fishermen.

He said a Victorian bragged to him of catching 55 pink salmon in one day in Saanich Inlet.

"I asked him what he did with them," he recounted.

"His reply was: 'I gave a couple of the better ones away and buried the rest in the garden.'"

Somebody Up There Likes Weatherman

A 15-year stint as Victoria's "weather man" comes to an end June 1 when Bill Mackie takes a promotion in the transport department weather service.

He will move to Vancouver where he will be superintendent of observational weather services for British Columbia.

John L. Knox, chief of DOT regional meteorological services, said: "We realize what a fine job he has done in Victoria. It's a step up for Bill. We're going to make sure he is replaced by a top-notch man."

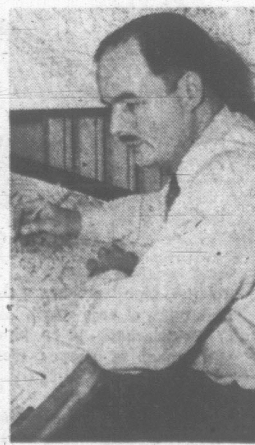

He said Mr. Mackie's successor has not been named.

But he stressed that the change does not represent a reorganization of the weather reporting and forecast service, merely a shuffle of posts.

PROGRAM DIRECTOR

Working out of the regional office in Vancouver, Mr. Mackie will be in charge of all B.C. stations sending in weather observations and direct the program responsible for Pacific Ocean observations.

Besides the department's weather ships working on Station Pape some 900 miles at sea from Juan de Fuca Strait, this will include liaison with shipping companies and aircraft providing regular service in the North Pacific.

His land territory will extend to the Yukon and Northwest Territories borders, although the northernmost station reporting weather information is at Dease Lake, B.C.

City Expansion East on Yates Seen in Future

Downtown Victoria will expand eastward along Yates Street, a leading businessman predicts.

Harold Elworthy, chairman of island Tug and Barge Ltd., said the street now forming one of the urban crossroads with Douglas Street will be upgraded, probably with more office accommodation or stores.

East of Blanshard Street today Yates is largely automotive in character, with supply houses, light industry and agencies.

Master planning for downtown Victoria, conducted by Capital Region Planning Board, indicates a new localization of office structures in the Cook-Fort district just two streets south of Yates.

SPECIAL INTEREST

Mr. Elworthy has a special interest in the area as owner of the Beggs building, former temporary city police station, RCAF reserve and recruiting headquarters, and ex-garage at Yates and Quadra.

He said he plans a new exterior for the block-deep building to help make the neighborhood more attractive.

The interior, which he feels is suited to store or office conversion, will be altered according to the needs of lessees. A number of partitions and the mezzanine floor have been taken out.

Two Admit Guilt After Gas Taken From Truck Yard

Two youths caught stealing gas from a trucking company pleaded guilty in central court today to theft under $50.

Robert Cameron Ward and Roger Leo LaBerge, both of 1033 Queens, were remanded to March 15 for sentence.

Police said the pair and a juvenile drove to McRae Bros. Trucking, 1445 Ocean View, early today and filled three plastic containers from a drum. They were filling the fourth when caught by one of the owners of the trucking firm.

They sped away in their car, but police apprehended them later in front of their home.

The juvenile was to appear in juvenile court today charged with a similar offence.

Ottawa Team To Examine Pay

A pay adjustment is in the offing for armed services personnel.

The news that possible pay increases are in the wind came with the announcement today that a team of experts from Ottawa will visit Victoria next month.

The team will confer with representatives of all navy and army ranks in the city to try to establish a general principle governing armed forces pay and allowance structure.

This is the first time such a comprehensive investigation has been ordered.

In the past, possible changes have been reviewed from headquarters with no in-field consultations.

DATE TENTATIVE

Tentative date for discussions with navy personnel is April 4. The following day, the four-man team will hold talks with army representatives at Work Point Barracks.

In addition to seeking information on the present pay set-up, the investigators will outline their mission and its purposes.

Heading the team will be A. Klovian, representing the deputy minister of national defence.

Assisting him will be Lt.-Col. W. J. Shepherd (army), Commander T. H. Crone (navy), and Wing Commander G. S. Simpson (air force).

The comprehensive survey will investigate such aspects as pay and rank, progressive pay increments, subsistence allowance, marriage allowance, and special allowances payable for risk, hazard, responsibility and environment.

Similar meetings will be held at service establishments across the country.

IMPAIRED DRIVER

A motorist who sideswiped another auto Saturday night on Trans-Canada Highway pleaded guilty in central court today to impaired driving.

No Uniformity in Fact and Rumors With Regard to New Service Uniform

Appearance of a new uniform for Canada's integrated armed forces must wait for thorough meshing of the administrative gears, Defence Minister Paul Hellyer said Saturday.

Despite rumors claiming Esquimalt naval stores are filled with the new issue, the forces have made no decision as to when the neutral shade — whatever color it may be — will appear as issue.

Latest suggestions have the color as dark olive, which compares with nothing in the services at present.

A naval spokesman today said there is no basis to the rumor that stores here have either uniforms or bulk material in stock.

JUST A DETAIL

Mr. Hellyer, here to take part in B.C. Liberals 1966 convention, said uniforms are one of the details of integration. Getting the functional aspects of a single force squared away is of far more importance, he said.

One of the more important matters to be dealt with is deciding Canada's naval shipbuilding requirements for the 1970s.

"We must know by 1968," he said.

By then would be known the role that can be played by hydrofoil craft as an anti-submarine defence, upon which the defence department is spending much research and money.

The minister said one direct benefit of integration so far is the ability of headquarters to divert funds for hydrofoil hull and weapons development from a variety of other research programs.

Mr. Hellyer said he sympathized with problems leading to a recent British decision to abolish the Fleet Air Arm.

"But I don't think I should comment on the particular resolutions," he said.

As for Canada's sole aircraft carrier, Bonaventure, the ship will be refitted this year and will be kept in operation until 1975, the minister said.

"No immediate change is planned in land-based naval air units," he said.

Police Seeking Amateur Gangs In Break-Ins

Five Safes Smashed; 17 Watches In Loot

Amateur gangs are believed responsible for a wave of safe cracking and break-ins in the city and Saanich at the weekend. Thieves broke into 11 business premises smashing safes in five of the seven Victoria burglaries.

Biggest haul was 17 watches taken from a Royal Oak hardware store. It was believed to be the work of young people who also entered a garden shop, cafe and beauty parlor.

The raid Saturday night on four shops in Royal Oak Shopping Plaza was not linked to the city break-ins. Detective-Sergeant Robin Stewart said.

He added Saanich police were looking for "young people" in connection with the entries.

The thieves took the watches from the hardware store and 23 cents from the coffee shop till.

Victoria police believe the safe thefts were done "all by the same crew."

"They don't know anything about opening safes and they're not getting anything," said Detective-Sergeant Norman Bath.

Police found a safe lying on its back and its door pried open Sunday when they investigated a break-in at Victoria Bottle Exchange, 640 Discovery.

No money was reported taken. Entry was gained by smashing a window and prying open an office door.

Thieves scaled a stack of lumber to break through a roof window and get into a coffee room of Shawngigan Building Supply Ltd., 2000 Government Street, but again, nothing was taken.

The result was the same at Smith Cedar Products, 3912 Cumberland Road, when thieves tried to crack the safe and pried open a filing cabinet.

Space-Age Research Unveils Jet-Set Dish

By Penny Saver

The quest for a new type of tableware that will not break has been one of the main concerns of housewives everywhere throughout the ages, ever since the first dish was invented. It all started, by my guess, when some inventive caveman, maybe the same one who came up with the wheel, presented his wife with a matched set of dishes. This was of carved mammoth's tusk (stoneware hadn't yet been invented), and just as he stepped over the cave threshold with the dishes in his arms, he tripped! Crash—and she had to wait for him to kill another mammoth before he could replace the broken pieces.

Well, the tableware industry has come a long way since those early days. Through the years they have gradually been improving their products bit by bit, until just recently they have come up with what, I'm sure, is the answer to the housewife's prayer, as she stands sadly holding a broken dish in one hand and a dustpan in the other.

A relatively new set of tableware that is guaranteed for three years against cracking, breaking, or "crazing," has just arrived in Victoria. "Crazing" is the term used to describe the tiny lines that form sometimes in the glaze of pottery. These pieces are made of a unique type of glass-ceramics, developed by this company from space-age research. It has the look and feel of fine china, yet so strong that a dropped plate actually bounces!

Cups are items that usually get "rough and tough" handling around the household. The cups made of this glass are also guaranteed against breakage, and this includes the breaking of handles as well. These cups are molded in one piece—cup and handle together—which gives them added strength.

If you feel that you would like to buy the pieces separately, instead of the whole set at once, you may—even down to purchasing cups and saucers separately.

The designs that these are available in are simply fascinating. The plates, in particular, come in plain white; floral design, or classic pattern. The 10-inch dinner plate sells for $2.95 and $3.50, respectively, in the plain and patterned plate. The medium-size (eight by five-eighths inches) sell for $2.25 in plain white, and $2.65 patterned. Bread and butter plates, in the six and five-eighths-inch size, are priced at $1.95 in white, and $2.25 in either design.

The cups of this set come in two styles or shapes. One is the traditional shape that always looks elegant. The other is a tall, contemporary shape which is used with the saucer for formal serving, or goes casual without a saucer as a smart mug for coffee.

Each cup holds eight ounces, and sells for $3.95 complete with the saucer. There is only one style of saucer, which complements either cup. Bowls come in two sizes, the 16-ounce size and the nine-ounce one. The larger is available in plain white for $2.75, solid blue and pewter for $2.95. The smaller comes only in plain white for $2.25.

THE BETTER HALF

By Bob Barnes

"I know it's probably none of my business, but have I had breakfast yet?"

TODAY'S RECIPE

POTATOES VINAIGRETTE

One 5½ oz. package scalloped potatoes, 3 cups boiling water, 6 slices bacon, ½ cup chopped onion, 1 tsp. salt, dash pepper, ½ tsp. celery salt, ½ tsp. paprika, ½ cup water, ½ cup French dressing, 2 tbsps. vinegar.

Add potato slices to boiling water and cook on medium heat until tender—about 20 minutes; drain. While potatoes are cooking, fry bacon slowly until crisp; remove from pan; drain and crumble. Sauté onion in two tablespoons of the bacon fat until tender; stir in sauce mix

(from scalloped potatoes), salt, pepper, celery salt and paprika. Combine water, dressing and vinegar and add to sauce mixture in skillet; stir until blended and cook until thick. Add cooked potato slices and crumbled bacon to sauce; fold lightly with a spatula until well coated. Serve in lettuce-lined bowl if desired; top with radish slices.

Now Every Woman is entitled to look YOUNGER!

A new startling discovery has been made by a small group of skin physiologists. They found a way to make the skin of face and throat actually drink tiny but sufficient quantities of water, to quickly gain an appearance of fresh, smooth youthfulness it hasn't had for years. Facial lines, particularly around the eyes, and throat creases are said to more or less "get lost" as this water gets beneath the skin's surface to push them out of sight.

By special arrangement with the discoverers of this remarkable technique, a semi-lotion has been formulated which makes home application easy, pleasant and effective. The name of this preparation is 2nd Debut. This amazing discovery fresh from an American triumph, now comes to you—if you want to make heads turn your way once more and again enjoy the rapt attention bestowed upon you in that first Spring!

Your face will look younger, you will acquire a fresher smoothness, which restores the extra all-important impact of the beauty your facial features have always had. Get a bottle today. The 4 oz. bottle is $3.75, clinical visit only $1.25.

HOW 2nd Debut TAKES YEARS OFF YOUR LOOKS

The active ingredient that enables 2nd Debut to make facial skin younger has been named CEF600. It penetrates the outer layer of skin, carries millions of tiny droplets of pure water that the skin has lost during its natural ageing process. This water finds its way under the lines and wrinkles, and as it accumulates there, pushes those unwanted indentations upward. Progressively the face and neck fill out and look smoother and younger again. The result is startling.

This ingredient (CEF600) is compounded into smooth-smoothing and delightful-to-use 2nd Debut. Use nightly (and daily under make-up) so that during 24 hours of the day it is carrying water into your skin bringing it new life, new youth and new beauty.

FOR THE YOUNGER WOMAN TOO!

The younger woman who does not need the full help of 2nd Debut may more quickly lift her face out of lines and wrinkles with 2nd Debut containing CEF1200.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Does She or Doesn't She—Wear a Wig or Hair Piece?

Things have come to a pretty pass when you never know whether it's a woman's own hair or a wig you see.

When you look at her. The tremendous popularity of wigs, wiglets and other hair pieces rolls on unabated.

At a large party not long ago I was talking with a small group of friends which was close to another small group. There were two friends of mine in the nearby group and I couldn't help overhearing a snatch of their conversation.

"Does she have it on today?"

"I don't think so."

"Oh, I do! That's her wig."

Imagine their surprise when I turned my head and said, "I don't have it on today."

It is easy to understand why these hair extras are so much in demand. In the first place they add variety. You can create a new hairdo without having to have a special new cut or wait for your hair to grow out. But more than that, they are a boon when you are wind-blown and don't have time to get to a beauty salon before an important occasion, when you have been swimming, when you are in-between color touch-ups, or are letting your permanent grow out. They add body to fine hair and generally come to your aid on those days or evenings when you "can't do a thing with your hair."

The hairpieces come in infinite variety in size, shape and length... everything from a full wig to one curl. The small pieces which you comb in with your own hair are tremendously popular. Many of these are quite inexpensive and often a machine-made piece is just as effective as one which is hand-made. However, if you are getting one which goes in front of your hairline, rather than behind it, the first few rows should be done by hand. The hair is in definite rows when the wig is machine-made.

The price varies greatly depending on the kind of hair used, the size of the piece, whether it is machine-made or hand-made or a combination of both. Wigs made of synthetic hair are less expensive than those with real hair. European hair is the most expensive. Oriental hair is widely used today. When very fine hair is used the cost is greater because more hairs must go into every square inch than when the hairs are coarser. While you can pay hundreds of dollars for these feminine pickups, there are many hairpieces which are within the range of the average woman's pocketbook. In other words, they are no longer necessarily a luxury item.

Tomorrow I will bring you information about the care of your hairpiece or wig. Are you worrying because your hair is thinning? If so you may want my booklet, "Is Your Hair Thinning?" If you would like to have this send 15 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it. Address Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

DEAR ABBY...

Appreciation Is Reason for Gift

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Am I losing my mind? Please tell me what a "good-by gift" is. I always thought a "good-by gift" was a present given to someone who was leaving. Well, listen to this: My husband is leaving the city. His firm is transferring him to Ottawa, so HE bought his secretary a pair of antique andirons as a "good-by" gift. Why should he give her a "good-by" gift? SHE isn't going away, he is. Please straighten this out for me.

DEAR ABBY: What can (or should) a father do in the following situation? My son is 29. His wife is 27. They are both college graduates and have been married five years. No children. Yesterday my son gave me the shocking news that he and his wife are getting a divorce. He says they are "pals"—not lovers, whatever that means.

They live 1,500 miles from us, but we see them three or four times a year. They seemed very compatible. Never any quarreling or bickering. My son says they are "bored" with each other and are mutually agreeable to ending the marriage on friendly terms.

I advised him to consult his clergyman or a marriage counselor to see if something can't be worked out. He said, "What for? We both know what we want out of a marriage and we aren't getting it, so we might as well go our separate ways while there are no children to consider." Somehow, Abby, I just cannot condone ending a marriage because of "boredom." Am I right?

NEW ENGLANDER: Perhaps there is more to it than they care to tell. In any case, no one can "save" a marriage neither party thinks is worth saving. Your son did not ask your advice. He merely informed you of his intentions.

DEAR ABBY: What makes men customers want to pull a waitress' apron strings? We have our aprons tied in a neat bow, and after it has been pulled by five or six wise guys it looks all limp and ragged. I've had to swat several men on the hands with my order pad to keep them from pulling at my apron strings. Every waitress I know who wears an apron with a bow in the back has the same trouble. Why? A woman would never untie another woman's bow.

UNTIED: DEAR UNTIED: It's the little boy in some men that prompts them to be impish. They think it's cute. They're only trying to call attention to themselves. Some women use the same childish technique when they see a man with a bow tie.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "LIKES TO SWING": If you're trying to pull the wool over her eyes, better try another yarn.

Problems? Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send one dollar to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

SEW SIMPLE

Dear Eunice: I just finished putting sleeves into a suit and thought they really looked good until I pressed them. Now they are flat and shapeless at the sleeve cap... I could cry. Why did pressing change them?

the easy to follow step-by-step instructions. Send 10 cents and a self-addressed stamped envelope to Eunice Farmer, in care of this paper, with your request. Sleeves will never be a problem again!

Mrs. Ernest Moro wins a Tailor Trix pressing board for the following idea.

"For very effective, unique stationery, use the decorative stitches of your zig-zag sewing machine and add interesting borders or designs to solid color paper. The design could be in any color and in a variety of styles. My favorite is a border ½ inch from the edge on one edge on one side and continuing to one end, instead of the entire border. Just thread the machine as usual. The thread stitches beautifully on paper!"

(This is the type of idea I have been searching for. Send me anything that is really original and different that we may share with everyone. Even your children could have fun doing this and might surprise you with their own creativity. Besides, you might win a Tailor Trix pressing board for your idea.)

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Boles, 1301 Rudlin Street, announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Betty Jane, to Mr. Lawrence Stuart Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Smith, 1728 Newton Street. The wedding will take place on Saturday, March 26, at 8 p.m. in Metropolitan United Church. Rev. E. Laura Butler will officiate. (Campbell Studio.)

Horseshoe Fulfills Tradition For Bride Carol Anne Johnston

Fulfilling the tradition of "something old" was a small silver horseshoe for Carol Anne Johnston when she became the bride of David James Napper recently. The charm had been carried by the bride's mother at her wedding. "Something borrowed" from the groom's mother, Mrs. J. G. Napper, was an heirloom lace handkerchief. The bride's ensemble was a floor-length sheath of white brocade, styled in train. The bodice featured a round neckline and sleeves ending in lily points. A coronet of net leaves held her shoulder-length veil and she carried red roses in her bouquet. Her only jewelry was a drop pearl necklace and matching earrings.

Rev. A. G. MacLeod heard marriage vows exchanged between the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Johnston, 4222 Majestic Drive, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Napper, 3400 Browning Street, St. Aidan's United Church was decorated with baskets of spring flowers for the occasion. Mr. Johnston gave his daughter in marriage.

Dave Palmer played the organ during the ceremony. The bride's attendants were matron of honor Mrs. T. A. Luscombe, and bridesmaids, the Misses Janice Johnston and Lynda Napper, sisters of the principals. They were gowned in dresses of pink organza over taffeta, which featured scoop necklines and small cap sleeves. Their matching headpieces were three roses of the same material. Pink carnations were in their bouquets. Jewelry was silver lockets, gifts of the bride.

Lawrence Girardau was best man, and guests were ushered by Terry Totzke and Tom Luscombe.

At the reception which followed in the lounge of Goodacre Towers, the bride and groom cut a wedding cake which was decorated with pink roses. Baskets of pink sweetheart roses, and silver candelabra with white candles decorated the lounge. Richard W. Yates proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling on honeymoon to Harrison Hot Springs, the bride chose a turquoise worsted wool suit with beige accessories. An orchid corsage completed her outfit.

The couple is now living in Goodacre Towers, 350 Douglas Street.

'Fancy-Free' Coiffures Start Audience Dreaming

Take a few swirling curves and soft curls, lift the crown for a little height, build it up on one side, and what have you got? "Fancy-Free," the asymmetrical hairstyle that moves.

The flowing coiffure, "what's new" in style for '66, was presented to a captive audience Thursday evening in the ballroom of the Empress Hotel by the Victoria Hairstyling Council of the British Columbia Hairdressers Association.

Over 400 guests viewed the flatteringly feminine "do," which remained in the limelight throughout the evening as the theme, "Fancy-Free is the Vogue for 1966."

During the show, the style was adapted to each hour, from morning chores to festive evening functions. Not only was it the little miss at play, but advanced up to activities of the "golden years" for matrons.

Advice on hair care was given by Danny Hajnal. George Molnar spoke on proper hair coloring. A question and answer period followed the show.

The treatment and use of hairpieces and wigs was discussed by Edward Williams.

Recreation, daytime, after-five and evening coiffures were styled by the following members of the association: Peter Finster, William Kapteyn, Charles Locker, Mrs. N. Vida, Tibor Uranyi, Edward Williams, Johnny Labiotis, George Molnar,

Presented By 'Old Girls' of St. Margaret's

SEASON RUSHED BY STYLE SHOW

A hint of spring and a glimpse of summer softened Victoria's still-wintery atmosphere Saturday.

Pupils, both past and present; parents and friends of St. Margaret's School gathered in the lovely Rockland Avenue home of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Roberts for a preview of fashion offerings for the coming season. The event was the spring tea and fashion show sponsored by the school's Old Girls' Association and featuring fashions from Eaton's. Special guest was "old girl" Mrs. George R. Pearkes.

Fashions, presented informally, ranged from smartly tailored suits and ensembles to frothy, romantic patio gowns, perfect for spring and summer entertaining. Clothes shown "for the very young" brought gasps of admiration, as the tiny models paraded shyly past their audience. Most of the youngsters' garments combined a measure of practicality welcome to all mothers' hearts, with style and color that the youngsters would love.

VIBRANT SHADES

Among highlights of the show was an evening outfit of brilliant tangerine and orange floral pattern on a pale background, of whisper-thin sheer material. Topped with a bloused, surplice-style bodice, the real show-stopper was the culotte skirt, floor-length and knife-pleated.

A second-evening outfit of palest pink, featured a fitted top, scoop-necked and sleeveless, and a full floating skirt. Gathered and rising slightly in front at the waistline, the skirt draped gracefully as the model walked.

Show-stopper in the junior division was an adorable pink and white outfit, knit to work wonders for its tiny model. The pink pleated skirt was topped with a white-and-pink sweater and its own matching jacket.

Vancouver Wedding

A wedding of interest to Victorians took place recently at Christ Church Cathedral in Vancouver when Miss Bernice (Bunny) Hughes, a former resident of Victoria and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Hughes of this city, became the bride of Mr. Clyde Gavin Cowan, Vancouver. Travelling to Vancouver for their sister's wedding were the Misses Gwynedd and Norah Hughes of Victoria and Mr. Lewis Hughes, Edmonton, who gave his sister in marriage. The couple, now honeymooning in Carmel, Calif., will make their home in Vancouver.

Spring Motif

Large daisies decorated the white box which contained the gifts presented to Mrs. R. Housman when she was entertained at a recent baby shower in the Earle Street home of Mrs. D. Fleming. Co-hostess was Mrs. D. Fleming. A floral arrangement of flamingo-toned carnations, heather and saxifrage centred the refreshment table. Attending the affair were Mrs. F. Housman, Mrs. C. Brousson, Mrs. R. Barber, Mrs. J. Ainscough, Mrs. T. Cave, Mrs. J. Penner, Mrs. P. Penner, Mrs. A. Spent, Mrs. G. Whitehead, Mrs. D. Welch, the Misses Donna Spent, Daryl and Susan Barber and Arvelia Penner.

Mainland Publisher To Address Club

Stuart Keate, publisher of the Vancouver Sun, will discuss "The Newspaper and the Community" Wednesday, when he addresses members of the Women's Canadian Club and their guests.

From Vancouver, Mr. Keate is a former publisher of the Victoria Daily Times. He has served with Time, Inc., in New York, and as Montreal bureau chief for Time and Life magazines, and is currently president of The Canadian Press and a member of the Canada Council.

The meeting will be held at 2:30 p.m. in the Empress Hotel ballroom.

DARLING

Victoria Premiere
Fox Cinema

Movie critics have showered laurels on this off-beat English satire since it was first shown in London, New York and other large-centres last year.

In consequence there were block-length queues outside the Fox Cinema at both performances Saturday night. Some were shocked, a few were disgusted but the majority seemed to like what they saw.

Disregarding its morals, I would rate Darling as a brilliant, relentless and often very witty satire on London's varied social sets and some of the more grotesque types to be found in all big cities.

TUNING UP for their Number One song "Sweets for My Sweet," is Don and the Good Times. They will appear this Friday at Schofield Roller Rink.

'TIME SPED BY TOO QUICKLY DURING EXCELLENT CONCERT'

By JOAN MASON HURLEY

Like educated conversation at a dinner table, chamber music requires a certain degree of cultivation in those present.

Enthusiasts, in fact, may even prefer it to the noisy banquet of 75 instruments all speaking at once on disparate levels.

I was glad to be a guest on Sunday afternoon at the McPherson Theatre when the Musical Arts presented a concert given by the faculty of the Victoria School of Music. The hour and a half which it lasted sped by all too quickly.

First on the program was Beethoven's delightful Trio in B-flat with Hans Siegrist, 'cello, Robin Wood, piano, and featuring Barry Moncur, clarinet, who produced an impeccable performance with tone both smooth and mellow.

This work, purely academic in form, embodies the very essence of chamber music. The melody-chases itself from one instrument to another in lovely trilling passages. The slow movement was notable for the fabulous quality of the piano playing, the like of which one is not accustomed to hear, generally speaking in Victoria. The third movement was truly a conversation, with the witticisms of each solo instrument being appreciatively repeated by the other two.

Next was Mozart's difficult Quartet for Oboe and Strings. The writing for the oboe in this work is of an ambitious, nay virtuosic, quality. The earnest young soloist, 18-year-old John de Jarnatt, appeared understandably nervous, but he executed the intricate chromatic scales and cunningly juxtaposed high and low notes for the most part exceedingly competently, and his skill was enthusiastically cally applauded by the audience. Playing the less showy parts were Jean Angers, violin, Kenneth Copeland, viola, and Hans Siegrist, 'cello.

I felt that Mr. Siegrist had the most unrewarding task of the afternoon. He played in every

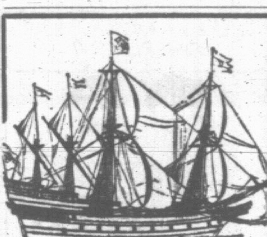

Students Secondary Upgraded

A high school that uses a university approach to teaching was described for Greater Victoria school teachers in convention Friday.

Roy Carlson outlined the teaching methods at John Marshall High School in Portland, Ore., where he is project director.

He said some classes taught by team-teaching methods include as many as 350 students and there are seminar groups with as few as 15 students.

About one-third of the students' time is unscheduled and independent study is encouraged. Mr. Carlson said students use their time well and discipline problems have almost disappeared.

A picturesque view of the ocean, windswept shores and islands lend a pleasing atmosphere to your dining and dancing. Specially selected dishes, combined with the dancing music of Beven Gore-Langton, blend in to make your evening complete.

DO-SI-DO EVENTS

Work Off Spring Energy!

By CANDIDE TEMPLE

Top spot on the square dance calendar this month is taken by the Daffodil Dance, to be held March 30 at Esquimalt Jr. High School.

Now in its third year, the Daffodil dance ranks high among events, which square dancers really look forward to in the Victoria area.

Sponsored by the Square-dancers, a local square dance club, the dance is planned to let do-si-doers work off a little spring energy and usher in the new season in style.

Setting for the dance, of course, will be masses of daffodils, Saanich-grown and banded up everywhere to lend the hall a festive touch.

Time and date for the dance have been picked so as not to interfere with other activities. It will be mid-week, Wednesday, so as not to conflict with other square dance groups, and runs early, 8 p.m. to 10:30.

Daffodil dance tickets are $1 a couple.

Square dancing this week:

BLEAN, England—Grimly, Miss Gwendolen Barter watched from her car as the gaily dressed fox-hunters cornered their quarry in a hole in the ground. Then she figured she had had enough.

The 61-year-old member of the League Against Cruel Sports sprinted to the scene and threw herself into the hole from which the huntmen had been trying to dig the fox.

Angry members of the Thanet and Hearn Hunt Club yanked her out three times but she kept climbing back in.

Finally, the exasperated hunters called police, who hauled Miss Barter out for good and took her away. The fox was killed.

"I can bear to watch hunting from horseback. I can even see why it is exciting," said Miss Barter.

"But I thought that the way they were digging out the fox yesterday was cold-blooded, and I just jumped into the hole to stop them."

MOSCOW—Yevgeny Samoilov, veteran Soviet actor and winner of three Stalin prizes, has apologized for being drunk on stage and promised to reform.

In a letter to a Moscow newspaper he said he was "not sober" when he acted in Nikolai Pogodin's play, The Aristocrats, Feb. 27.

"This undoubtedly affected my acting and aroused justified rebukes from the audience," the 53-year-old actor wrote.

"The collective and management of the theatre severely censured my misbehavior, which was a discredit to the vocation of a Soviet actor and compromised our theatre."

BANGKOK—Mrs. Rachani Sea Lao, 23, told a Thailand court that she knew Sunil, 40, had had eight other wives before he married her, but she warned him to curb his roving eye. He didn't so she shot him last August. She was sentenced to 18 years in prison.

WARBOROUGH, England—Jack Stroudley, who's been tending with his neighbors who've been griping about the noise his two police dogs make, is putting the matter to a vote.

Stroudley, bookmaker, distributed 250 ballots to the villagers seeking a vote of confidence and asking them if they want him to move out of town. He says he's "odds-on" to win.

But if they turn thumbs down, Stroudley has promised to sell his $36,400 home, pack up and move.

PARIS—A pretty 16-year-old Syrian bride of four months staged a sitdown strike at Orly Airport today and refused to continue her journey to Caracas, Venezuela, to rejoin the husband she said she married against her will.

Brown-haired Mouna Basnagi arrived at Orly from Damascus Saturday to catch a connecting flight to Caracas, where her husband, tailor George Taikh, 27, was waiting.

She was accompanied by members of Taikh's family. But when the time came to board the Caracas plane she slipped away and hid.

Airport staff found her some time later sobbing in the transit lounge. She said she married Taikh in Syria only because her family insisted.

He had returned to his native land to find a bride to share his new life in Venezuela and went back there shortly after the wedding to prepare a home.

Speaking through an interpreter, Mouna tearfully told airport officials she was forced on to the plane in Damascus.

"I want to go home to my mother," she said. "I'm happy only with her. I don't love the man they made me marry. 'Help me,' she said.

WOMAN ON SECOND PLANE
Reassuring Call Overtaken by Crash
NORTH DARTMOUTH, Mass. (UPI)—Mrs. Dolores Duarte received a telephone call Friday night from her sister in Japan who wished to reassure relatives that she and her husband were not aboard a Canadian Pacific Airways plane crash in Tokyo.

Mrs. Karol Kawa of Dartmouth told Mrs. Duarte that she and her husband were about to leave Tokyo for Hong Kong on the next leg of their trip and wanted to reassure the family back home they were all right.

Saturday Mrs. Duarte was notified that the Kawas were among the passengers of a BOAC jetliner which crashed en route to Hong Kong, killing all aboard.

Rescue Missions Bring Relief To Storm-Battered Dakotas

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Road-plowing crews and rescue missions began bringing relief today to blizzard-battered parts of the Dakotas and Minnesota where the toll of deaths stood at 16.

Ranchers were counting up a heavy loss of livestock, especially in South Dakota as helicopters and airplanes, bulldozers and plows worked to relieve thousands stranded in what has been termed the Dakotas' worst such storm in decades.

Six of the storm deaths occurred in South Dakota and five each in North Dakota and Minnesota.

The staggering loss in cattle and sheep may run in the millions of dollars.

LOST $100,000

One rancher, Frank Maciejewsky Sr. of Timber Lake, S.D., estimated his at $100,000. "I had 400 to 500 cattle and the same number of sheep," he said. "The cattle bunched up next to a shed in a feedlot and smothered. The sheep got smothered, too, in those deep drifts."

"One of my neighbors lost 150 cows in a corral and another lost 100. A couple of barns collapsed under the snow on other ranches and killed some cows."

The North Dakota highway patrol reported officers had rescued 55 persons from stranded cars. Lt. Gov. Charles Tighe, acting in the absence of vacationing Governor William Guy of North Dakota, said "our helicopters are doing a good job," adding:

"Saturday night we picked up a child and a woman on separate farms. They had pneumonia. Today (Sunday) we're going after two children with frostbitten feet."

Near Ipswich, S.D., two blankets spread in the snow alerted a Civil Air Patrol pilot that aid was needed. He radioed for help and a sheriff used a powerful truck to buck drifts and take an ill man to a hospital.

HELP TOO LATE

At rural Morristown, S.D., another pilot saw the words "HELP" tramped out in the snow. Nearby, lay the lifeless form of an elderly rancher who lived alone.

Otto Mettler, a 48-year-old rancher, his wife and their seven-year-old son Lyle, waited nearly 60 hours in their marooned car near McLaughlin, S.D.

Mettler had had the foresight to buy some candy bars while they were in town, and these helped sustain them. His wife always packed away extra clothing in the car's trunk during winter and that kept them warm.

Finally, Saturday morning, the Mettlers crawled out onto the snowdrifts and found they could walk on the crusty surface to their home two miles away.

Mettler estimates at least half of his 100-herd of cattle died, a loss of about $15,000.

ULSTER'S POLICE READY

What Will Easter Bring?

DUBLIN (AP)—Ireland celebrates the 50th anniversary of its 1916 Easter rising next month and already emotional tension is rising.

The border with the six counties of Ulster, which chose to stay with Britain, is quieter than it has been in years. But beneath the fluttering Union Jacks and the surface air of business prosperity in the northern capital of Belfast there's more than a little anxiety about what this Easter may bring.

Ulster's armed police reserves have been called up for special commando-type training at three camps preparatory to being posted at strategic border centres.

Leaders in both north and south are playing it cool, but old memories die hard.

Fight In Assembly

ANKARA (AP)—Fighting broke out in Turkey's National Assembly Saturday and five deputies were injured. Victims of flying chairs, briefcases, fists and feet received first-aid treatment at the Assembly's infirmary and were reported in good condition.

In the last week of February raiders planted two gasoline bombs in Dublin's British Legion Club, setting the stairs afire.

KITCHEN BOMBED

Another group hurled a gasoline bomb into the home of the British military attache in Dublin last Tuesday night, severely damaging the kitchen.

Churches and church schools were targets in Ulster, where the population is one-third Roman Catholic and two-thirds Protestant. Catholics make up 95 per cent of the people of the Republic.

A gasoline bomb was hurled against the stained glass window of St. John's in the Catholic section of Belfast, a Catholic school was set afire at Crumlin, St. Gerard's Catholic Church in Belfast was daubed with slogans and windows were smashed at the publishing office of Rev. Ian Paisley, chief spokesman of Belfast's extreme Protestant action group.

The outlawed Irish Republican Army was quick to deny all knowledge of the Belfast troubles.

Time Bomb Destroys Tower at Welsh Dam

WELSHPOOL, Wales (AP)—Saboteurs detonated a time bomb Sunday at the site of a dam which has been bitterly opposed by Welsh nationalists as an "exploitation" of the country's water resources.

An anonymous telephone call warned local police that a bomb had been placed at the dam site. Sixteen minutes later it exploded, destroying a 30-foot steel mast supporting one end of an aerial cableway. No one was injured.

Officials said this "act of sabotage" would hold up work on the $12,000,000 Clywedog Dam for up to six weeks.

The dam, due to be completed by spring, 1967, is designed to regulate the flow of the River Severn to improve water supplies along its length. Several cities in England stand to benefit.

Plaid Cymru, the Welsh nationalist party, has long opposed the flooding of valleys to make reservoirs for use by English cities.

1,000 N. Vietnamese Killed In Major Coastal Battle

SAIGON (AP)—An estimated 1,000 North Vietnamese regular troops fell at the weekend in a combined air-ground assault by 5,000 U.S. marines and South Vietnamese soldiers in a coastal valley 330 miles northeast of Saigon, a U.S. spokesman said today.

The U.S. 1st Infantry Division, operating 35 miles north of Saigon, killed 188 Viet Cong.

American planes continuing raids on North Viet Nam encountered at least eight surface-to-air missiles Saturday and Sunday. None of the Soviet missiles hit their mark.

The North Vietnamese made their stand against the marines in a heavily fortified village eight miles northwest of the provincial capital of Quang Ngai.

The U.S. spokesman said 516 enemy dead were confirmed by body count and perhaps another 450 were killed by air strikes and artillery barrages.

Rather than withdraw from the fertile rice fields, the North Vietnamese had chosen to stand and fight it out, he said.

Allied casualties were described as light.

HOVERCRAFT CHRISTENED

RAMSGATE, Eng. (UPI)—The first hovercraft for cross-channel service between England and France was christened here today.

QUAKES KILL 15 ACROSS TURKEY

ANKARA (AP)—Fifteen persons were killed in earthquakes which shook widely separated regions of east and northeast Turkey early today, the state radio network reported.

The Central Meteorology Bureau said the quake appeared to have been centred in the province of Erzurum, about 150 miles southwest of the Russian border.

Tremors described as "mild to fairly sharp" also were felt in Siirt and Mus provinces and two Black Sea provinces to the north.

2 WOMEN KILLED IN CRASH

NANAIMO (CP)—Two women are dead and a third in hospital following a car-truck collision a mile north of Qualicum today.

Dead are Mrs. Hilda Williams, 61, of Comox, and Mrs. Anne Covey, about 60, of Courtenay. In fairly good condition in hospital with undetermined injuries is Mrs. Kay Wilson, 26, of Courtenay.

RCMP said the crash occurred when the car containing the three women went out of control on the Island Highway and crashed head-on into a tanker truck.

Driver of the truck, John Dugas of Nanaimo, was uninjured.

Justice Minister May Step Down

(Times News Services)

OTTAWA—A crisis atmosphere pervaded Parliament Hill today.

The Commons began a new week amid hints of scandal involving the former Conservative government and the possible resignation of present Justice Minister Lucien Cardin.

One report suggested Prime Minister Pearson himself may step down.

JUSTICE MINISTER CARDIN... 'no answer'

The government is faced with a serious financial crisis. It has not money and must get the remainder of this year's estimates passed today.

The Toronto Star says that if Conservative opposition continues "the only way the government can get money to pay its bills is to dissolve Parliament—or to get a new leader for whom the Tories will pass the estimates."

The Star story said "moderates" in the Conservative party were attempting to avoid a showdown but Opposition Leader Diefenbaker is adamant.

"If Cardin's departure is not enough to soothe the angry opposition parties, informed observers speculate Prime Minister Pearson himself might have to resign to prevent another election..." the Star said.

The justice minister's name-dropping conjured up the ghost of Olga Munzinger, a beautiful East German girl reputed to have had a torrid liaison with a minister of a former Conservative government while she was employed in a Communist embassy in Ottawa.

Some reports have also indicated Olga may have been entangled with more than one minister of the same cabinet. All reports agree the woman was "a real dish," and some describe her as having been a former beauty queen.

Following a cabinet meeting this morning, Prime Minister Pearson said "no question of any resignation" arose.

Just before Pearson came out, Justice Minister Cardin emerged from the Centre Block cabinet room, and with a tight face said: "I have no answer to give you at all," when asked if he was resigning.

SOOTHE ANGER
Parliament Hill buzzed with rumors that Cardin may resign his justice portfolio in an attempt to soothe the opposition's anger over the government's handling of the Spencer spy case.

Cardin was placed in an awkward position when the prime minister reversed his position and granted the opposition's request for an in-camera inquiry in the Spencer case.

Pearson met with the cabinet to approve the terms of reference of a judicial inquiry into the dismissal of George Victor Spencer, 57, from his civil service job after alleged spying activities.

MONSIGNOR

MAIN AFFAIR
The Globe and Mail notes the woman's chief affair was first discovered by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who secured pictures of the girl and her minister-paramour, and informed the Conservative prime minister of his cabinet-member's involvement.

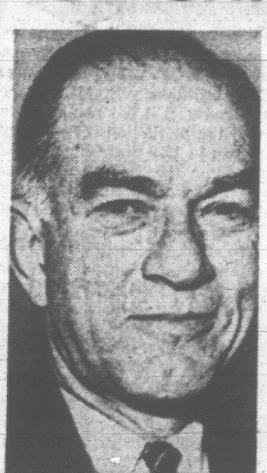

Another newspaper, the Toronto Telegram said Diefenbaker was "morally outraged," but eventually was convinced the affair involved only sex, not security.

Cardin challenged Diefenbaker to tell the Commons what he knew of the affair.

SENATOR WARNS:

'Real Danger Of China War'

FULBRIGHT... orders hearings

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator J. W. Fulbright said Sunday night there is present danger of war with China and announced early U.S. Senate hearings on that Communist-ruled country in an effort to lessen the peril.

The Arkansas Democrat, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee and a critic of U.S. policy in Viet Nam, called in a statement for a searching effort "to increase our understanding of China."

He said that might alter the "fatal expectancy" of war which he asserted is held by Chinese leaders and by some American officials.

Fulbright announced the group will begin Tuesday a series of hearings aimed at increasing public knowledge about China.

He said before fresh political and military decisions are made on Southeast Asia it is essential to try to understand the Chinese and their leaders.

SEES REAL DANGER

"The danger of war is real," he said. "It is real because China is ruled by ideological dogmatists who will soon have nuclear weapons at their disposal and who, though are more ferocious in words than in actions, nonetheless are intensely hostile to the United States."

"In the short run the danger of war between China and America is real because an open-ended war in Viet Nam can bring the two great powers into conflict with each other, by Continued on Page 2

Aid Bill Approved

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Senate foreign relations committee approved the Johnson administration's $415,000,000 foreign aid authorization bill today after rejecting policy riders opposing widening of the Viet Nam war.

Wealthy Viet Businessman Must Die

SAIGON (UPI)—South Viet Nam's new court for economic crimes today convicted a wealthy Saigon businessman of price speculation, hoarding and bribing and sentenced him to death.

Ta Vinh, 35, a Chinese merchant who directed the Sui Hing Import-Export Co., was found guilty after an all-day trial by three military officers serving as judges of the special court.

WAR ON HOARDERS

The court was created after Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky promised to wage war on hoarders and profiteers who have been blamed for much of Viet Nam's economic ills, including rampant inflation. Ky reportedly promised President Lyndon Johnson at last month's Honolulu conference to speed efforts to clean up corruption.

Ky personally presided over the court's opening ceremonies this morning in the yellow stucco Saigon court building near the presidential palace.

FIRST DEFENDANT

Ta Vinh, plump and bespectacled, was the first defendant to face the red-frocked judges. When the trial opened, his wife and several of their eight children rushed up as he took his place in the courtroom.

AFTER BOOK, CURIOUS THINGS BEGAN TO HAPPEN!

Detectives Hounding Auto Safety Critic

WASHINGTON — A few months after the publication of Ralph Nader's critical book on American automobiles, "Unsafe at Any Speed," detective agencies in Washington, Boston and New York began an investigation into his background and habits.

Did he have a normal sex-life? Was he anti-semitic? Did he belong to left-wing political groups? Was he a licensed driver? Was he professionally competent?

Other curious things began happening, according to an article by James Ridgeway in the current issue of The New Republic. Nader was bothered by pointless telephone calls on the eve of his testimony on auto safety before a congressional committee. People began following him.

An attractive brunette solicited his company at a casual meeting in a drug store on Feb. 20. Three days later, he was approached by a blonde in a supermarket who invited him to her apartment to move furniture around.

Investigators questioned his friends, his college professors, and a writer who had reviewed his book. The claimed Nader had applied for a job and they were checking him out. It was a plausible excuse but it was untrue. Nader was not job-hunting.

He was, instead, pursuing his interest in what is wrong with American cars — preparing his testimony for Congress and preparing for a meeting with auto-makers in Detroit.

Was it the auto-makers who had developed this unusual interest in a 32-year-old Connecticut lawyer?

Neither Nader nor reporter Ridgeway could find out.

One investigating firm, Allied Investigative Service of Washington, refused to discuss the matter with Ridgeway initially and then denied it had any interest in Nader.

The Boston detective firm, Management Consultants, brushed off the reporter with: "I am not at liberty to discuss these matters."

The New York firm, Vincent Gillen Associates, of Garden City, admitted asking about Nader for a "client..." considering him for an important job, to do research or something.

Gillen told Ridgeway the investigation is incomplete and "all I can say, it is good for Nader."

Nader, however, does not feel good about it.

"They can't hurt me," he said, "asking about my sex life, my drinking habits and things like that. I'm not vulnerable. But it's a strange thing. Suppose I were married and had several children and someone turned up something embarrassing. It would be intimidation for a writer.

"I think it's wrong, if anyone disagrees with my book or what I've had to say, to turn it into something personal like this. Let them debate the issues, instead of this kind of thing."

Ships Ready for Island Travellers

Where do all the ferries go when winter schedules reduce the number of ships plying between Vancouver Island and the mainland? Why, they go to a winter ferryland of course. There they are refitted and repainted, tuned up and newly equipped and their crews get courses in life boat drill and rescue techniques. The 22 ships take turns resting here at Deas Docks, near the mouth of the Fraser. Come April, again sleek and shining, the whole fleet will be servicing travellers to and from the Island and Sunshine Coast. The busy scene can only be glimpsed by aircraft.

FERRIES RECRUITING IN ENGLAND

B.C. Government Ferry Authority is trying to recruit marine engineers in Britain, it was revealed today.

Ronald Worley, assistant general manager of the Authority, confirmed a report that the drive is under way to help fill gaps in the staff.

He said there were insufficient marine engineers in this area and the Authority has sent W. B. Weston, in charge of ferry operations, to England to hire an undisclosed number.

FOR SERVICES

Ottawa Team To Examine Pay

A pay adjustment is in the offing for armed services personnel.

The news that possible pay increases are in the wind came with the announcement today that a team of experts from Ottawa will visit Victoria next month.

The team will confer with representatives of all navy and army ranks in the city to try to establish a general principle governing armed forces pay and allowance structure.

This is the first time such a comprehensive investigation has been ordered.

In the past, possible changes have been reviewed from headquarters with no in-field consultations.

DATE TENTATIVE

Tentative date for discussions with navy personnel is April 4. The following day, the four-man team will hold talks with army representatives at Work Point Barracks.

In addition to seeking information on the present pay set-up, the investigators will outline their mission and its purposes.

Impaired Driver In Sideswiping

A motorist who sideswiped another auto Saturday night on Trans-Canada Highway pleaded guilty in central court today to impaired driving.

Ivan McMahon, Malahat, B.C., was remanded to March 15 for sentence. Police said about $600 damage was done in the collision.

Five-Year-Old Victoria Girl Already Highland Dance Champ

A five-year-old Victoria girl has won two aggregate trophies for Highland dancing in the course of a week.

She is Willo Gadsby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Gadsby, 2708 Dufferin.

At the 13th annual indoor meet of Victoria Highland Games Association Saturday, Willo won the aggregate trophy for the highest total marks in the under-seven group.

The previous Saturday she won the aggregate trophy for the under-six group at the Highland games at Vancouver.

She won both awards for her performance of the Highland Fling and the Sword Dance.

Yet Willo has been studying dancing less than a year. She is a pupil at the Sheilagh Mallard School of Dancing and attends kindergarten at Willows Elementary.

BORN HERE

Born in Victoria, Willo showed an early interest in Highland dancing and could have inherited this from her father and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Thomson — all natives of Ayr, Scotland.

"We encouraged her in dancing," Mrs. Gadsby said, "because at the age of two she began to develop an in-turned foot and had to be fitted with an orthopedic shoe."

"This defect has since righted itself."

No Uniformity in Fact and Rumors With Regard to New Service Uniform

Appearance of a new uniform for Canada's integrated armed forces must wait for thorough meshing of the administrative gears, Defence Minister Paul Hellyer said Saturday.

Despite rumors claiming Esquimalt naval stores are filled with the new issue, the forces have made no decision as to when the neutral shade — whatever color it may be — will appear as issue.

Latest suggestions have the color as dark olive, which compares with nothing in the services at present.

A naval spokesman today said there is no basis to the rumor that stores here have either uniforms or bulk material in stock.

JUST A DETAIL

Mr. Hellyer, here to take part in B.C. Liberals 1966 convention, said uniforms are one of the details of integration. Getting the functional aspects of a single force squared away is of far more importance, he said.

One of the more important matters to be dealt with he said is deciding Canada's naval shipbuilding requirements for the 1970s.

"We must know by 1968," he said.

By then would be known the role that can be played by hydrofoil craft as an anti-submarine defence, upon which the defence department is spending much research and money.

The minister said one direct benefit of integration so far is the ability of headquarters to divert funds for hydrofoil hull and weapons development from a variety of other research programs.

Mr. Hellyer said he sympathized with problems leading to a recent British decision to abolish the Fleet Air Arm. "But I don't think I should comment on the particular resolutions," he said.

As for Canada's sole aircraft carrier, Bonaventure, the ship will be refitted this year and will be kept in operation until 1975, the minister said.

"No immediate change is planned in land-based naval air units," he said.

Police Seeking Amateur Gangs In Break-Ins

Five Safes Smashed 17 Watches In Loot

Amateur gangs are believed responsible for a wave of safe cracking and break-ins in the city and Saanich at the weekend. Thieves broke into 11 business premises smashing safes in five of the seven Victoria burglaries.

Biggest haul was 17 watches taken from a Royal Oak hardware store. It was believed to be the work of young people who also entered a garden shop, cafe and beauty parlor.

The raid Saturday night on four shops in Royal Oak Shopping Plaza were not linked to the city break-ins, Detective Sergeant Robin Stewart said.

He added Saanich police were looking for "young people" in connection with the entries. The thieves took the watches from the hardware store and 23 cents from the coffee shop till.

Victoria police believe the safe thefts were done "all by the same crew."

"They don't know anything about opening safes and they're not getting anything," said Detective Sergeant Norman Bath. Police found a safe lying on its back and its door pried open Sunday when they investigated a break-in at Victoria Bottle Exchange, 640 Discovery.

No money was reported taken. Entry was gained by smashing a window and prying open an office door.

Thieves scaled a stack of lumber to break through a roof window, and get into a coffee room of Shawinigan Building Supply Ltd., 2000 Government Street, but again, nothing was taken.

The result was the same at Smith Cedar Products, 3912 Cumberland Road, when thieves tried to crack the safe and pried open a filing cabinet.

A safe resisted thieves at Madson Esso, 901 Yates, but an undetermined amount of change was taken from a cigarette machine.

EMPTY SHOWROOM

The thieves, who police suspect had a key, entered through an empty showroom.

The safe at Pandora Texaco, 880 Pandora, was found unlocked but it contained only papers. Entry was gained by smashing a window.

Only thing reported taken was a tire tool found later at Renfrew Cleaners, 1012 Yates, where another safecracking was tried.

The dial was knocked off by a short-handled sledgehammer found at the scene by police. Again, nothing taken.

The thieves did a little better at B-A Sentinel Service, 1800 Douglas. Using the garage's tools, they pried open pop and cigarette machines which yielded $10.60 in coins.

B.C. Telephone Manager Moves To Prince George

Eric L. Mallett, former Victoria district manager for B.C. Telephone Co., will return to that post soon, according to a company announcement today.

The move is one of several personnel changes planned by BCT involving Victoria, Vancouver and Prince George offices.

A. A. Higinbotham, for several years manager of Victoria district, will become northern division manager in Prince George.

Mr. Mallett has been director of public relations in Vancouver, and his position will be taken by James A. MacInnes, who is now coastal engineering and construction manager in Vancouver.

Salmon Bootleggers Rapped by Troller At Fishing Hearing

A Sidney troller today told MLAs that "game hog" sports fishermen sell their catches as a bootleg operation during closure periods affecting commercial fishermen.

The accusation was made by Richard Larson, an independent fisherman living in Sidney, who appeared before a special legislative committee inquiring into the fishing industry.

Mr. Larson said commercial fishermen are policed closely to ensure they observe the closures but any sports fisherman can sell his catch by obtaining a licence at nominal cost.

"I have no quarrel with the true sportsman but there is a lot who should be called game hogs," he said.

He also told the committee — which is looking into a suggestion that licences be required for salt water sport fishing, particularly by Americans — that many U.S. yachtsmen reap

a fishing bonanza on the west coast of Vancouver Island and take home as much as 700 pounds of salmon.

"I have talked to a Yank who stated he really enjoyed his visit to our country as he and one other man on his yacht had caught 67 coho and chinook salmon in two days at Stewart Isle," he said.

He added that the visitor told him the trip hardly cost him anything as he had a diesel engine enabling him to fuel and provision in Seattle for the foray deep into Canadian fishing waters.

Mr. Larson also criticized local sports fishermen.

He said a Victorian bragged to him of catching 55 pink salmon in one day in Saanich Inlet.

"I asked him what he did with them," he recounted.

"His reply was: 'I gave a couple of the better ones away and buried the rest in the garden.'"

Somebody Up There Likes Weatherman

A 15-year stint as Victoria's "weather man" comes to an end June 1 when Bill Mackie takes a promotion in the transport department weather services.

He will move to Vancouver where he will be superintendent of observational weather services for British Columbia.

John L. Knox, chief of DOT regional meteorological services, said: "We realize what a fine job he has done in Victoria. It's a step up for Bill. We're going to make sure he is replaced by a top-notch man."

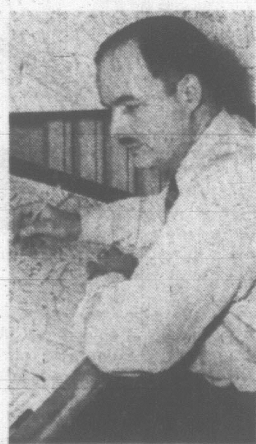

He said Mr. Mackie's successor has not been named.

But he stressed that the change does not represent a reorganization of the weather reporting and forecast service, merely a shuffle of posts.

PROGRAM DIRECTOR

Working out of the regional office in Vancouver, Mr. Mackie will be in charge of all B.C. stations sending in weather observations and direct the program responsible for Pacific Ocean observations.

Besides the department's weather ships working on Station Pape some 900 miles at sea

BILL MACKIE

His land territory will extend to the Yukon and Northwest Territories borders, although the northernmost station reporting weather information is at Dease Lake, B.C.

City Expansion East on Yates Seen in Future

Downtown Victoria will expand eastward along Yates Street, a leading businessman predicts.

Harold Elworthy, chairman of Island Tug and Barge Ltd., said the street now forming one of the urban crossroads with Douglas Street will be upgraded, probably with more office accommodation or stores.

East of Blanshard Street to-day Yates is largely automotive in character, with supply houses, light industry and agencies.

Master planning for downtown Victoria, conducted by Capital Region Planning Board, indicates a new localization of office structures in the Cook-Fort district just two streets south of Yates.

SPECIAL INTEREST

Mr. Elworthy has a special interest in the area as owner of the Beggs building, former temporary city police station, RCAF reserve and recruiting headquarters, and ex-garage at Yates and Quadra.

He said he plans a new exterior for the block-deep building to help make the neighborhood more attractive.

The interior, which he feels is suited to store or office conversion, will be altered according to the needs of lessees. A number of partitions and the mezzanine floor have been taken out.

Two Admit Guilt After Gas Taken From Truck Yard

Two youths caught stealing gas from a trucking company pleaded guilty in central court today to theft under $50.

Robert Cameron Ward and Roger Leo LaBerge, both of 1033 Queens, were remanded to March 15 for sentence.

Police said the pair and a juvenile drove to McRae Bros. Trucking, 1445 Ocean View, early today and filled three plastic containers from a drum.

They were filling the fourth when caught by one of the owners of the trucking firm.

They sped away in their car, but police apprehended them later in front of their home.

The juvenile was to appear in juvenile court today charged with a similar offence.

Magistrate William Ostler ordered restitution of the stolen gas.

Wealthy Viet Businessman Must Die

SAIGON (UPI)—South Viet Nam's new court for economic crimes today convicted a wealthy Saigon businessman of price speculation, hoarding and bribing and sentenced him to death.

Ta Vinh, 35, a Chinese merchant who directed the Sui Hing Import-Export Co., was found guilty after an all-day trial by three military officers serving as judges of the special court.

WAR ON HOARDERS

The court was created after Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky promised to wage war on hoarders and profiteers who have been blamed for much of Viet Nam's economic ills, including rampant inflation. Ky reportedly promised President Lyndon Johnson at last month's Honolulu conference to speed efforts to clean up corruption.

Ky personally presided over the court's opening ceremonies this morning in the yellow stucco Saigon court building near the presidential palace.

Spencer, subject of headlined House of Commons debate, as an alleged spy fired from the postal service, refused to blame anyone for his situation.

The 62-year-old former postal clerk was interviewed in Vancouver by Jack Webster on the CBC program This Hour Has Seven Days.

He refused to say under direct questioning whether he had received $3,000 to $4,000 from Russian Embassy officials as stated in the Commons by Justice Minister Cardin.

But he added: "I never betrayed my country."

He admitted being guilty "of being friendly" to Russia, being a member of the Canada-Soviet Friendship Society, and having the desire to travel to Russia.

He also welcomed the judicial inquiry Prime Minister Pearson has announced to investigate his firing.

OTTAWA (CP)—Mr. Justice Dalton Wells, of the Ontario Court of Appeals has been appointed a one-man commission to inquire into the George Victor Spencer spy case, Prime Minister Pearson announced today.

He said he would "like the mystery to be cleared up," perhaps an indication that Spencer himself would like the scope of the inquiry extended to include not only his treatment by the government but the activities over which he was dismissed.

SMOKED HEAVILY

The half-bald, bespectacled Spencer smoked heavily during the interview. He kept his head down and appeared extremely nervous and hesitant.

He spoke vaguely of wide studies of research by doctors in many countries that had helped himself and his mother, a "great fund of knowledge of treatment of human beings in sickness."

The studies helped him stand up to difficulties since he was fired last New Year's Eve, he said.

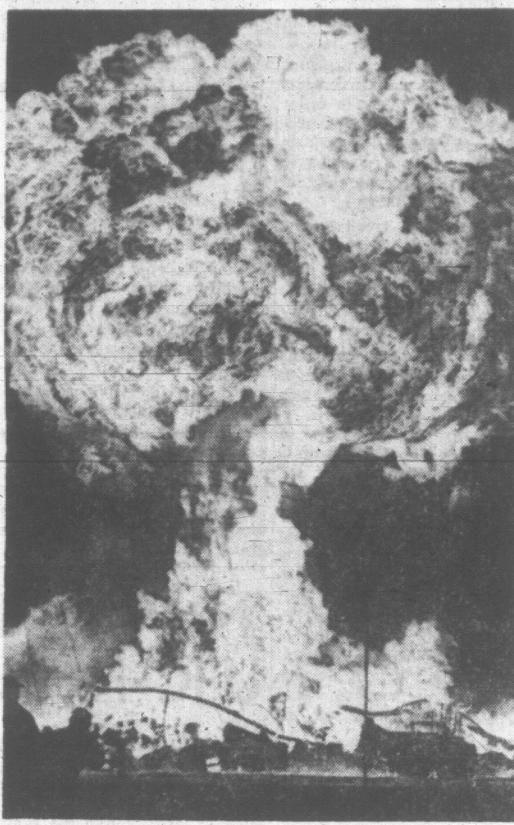

"Do you feel your rights were violated as a Canadian citizen and decorated war veteran," Mr. Webster asked.

"No," Spencer replied. "There's nothing in this life perfect. I've made mistakes ..."

Had his actions been wrongly interpreted by authorities?

"The authorities haven't misinterpreted what has happened," Spencer replied.

He could see that what he had done could possibly be embarrassing to the government. But he wanted a full questioning "so that all these things can be cleared up."

Justice Minister May Step Down

OTTAWA (CP)—The government plans to set up a judicial inquiry into security procedures, Prime Minister Pearson announced today in the Commons.

(Times News Services)

OTTAWA—A crisis atmosphere pervaded Parliament Hill today.

The Commons began a new week amid hints of scandal involving the former Conservative government and the possible resignation of present Justice Minister Lucien Cardin.

One report suggested Prime Minister Pearson himself may step down.

The government is faced with a serious financial crisis. It has no money and must get the remainder of this year's estimates passed today.

The Toronto Star says that if Conservative opposition continues "the only way the government can get money to pay its bills is to dissolve Parliament—or to get a new leader for whom the Tories will pass the estimates."

The Star story said "moderates" in the Conservative party were attempting to avoid a showdown but Opposition Leader Diefenbaker is adamant.

"If Cardin's departure is not enough to soothe the angry opposition parties, informed observers speculate Prime Minister Pearson himself might have to resign to prevent another election ..."

JUSTICE MINISTER CARDIN
... 'no answer'

Following a cabinet meeting this morning, Prime Minister Pearson said "no question of any resignation" arose.

Just before Pearson came out, Justice Minister Cardin emerged from the Centre Block cabinet room, and with a tight face said: "I have no answer to give you at all," when asked if he was resigning.

SOOTHE ANGER

Parliament Hill buzzed with rumors that Cardin may resign his justice portfolio in an attempt to soothe the opposition's anger over the government's handling of the Spencer spy case.

Cardin was placed in an awkward position when the prime minister reversed his position and granted the opposition's request for an in-camera inquiry in the Spencer case.

Pearson met with the cabinet to approve the terms of reference of a judicial inquiry into the dismissal of George Victor Spencer, 57, from his civil service job after alleged spying activities.

The Spencer case triggered an angry, one-sentence bombshell from Cardin in the Commons—over a sex-and-security case—"The Monsignor" or "Munsinger" affair.

The justice minister's name-dropping conjured up the ghost of Olga Munsinger, a beautiful East German girl reputed to have had a torrid liaison with a minister of a former Conservative government while she was employed in a Communist embassy in Ottawa.

Some reports have also indicated Olga may have been entangled with more than one minister of the same cabinet. All reports agree the woman was "a real dish," and some describe her as having been a former beauty queen.

The Globe and Mail notes the woman's chief affair was first discovered by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who "secured pictures of the girl and her minister-paramour, and informed the conservative prime minister of his cabinet member's involvement."

Another newspaper, the Toronto Telegram said Diefenbaker was "morally outraged," but eventually was convinced the affair involved only sex, not security.

Cardin challenged Diefenbaker to tell the Commons what he knew of the affair.

Structural Failure Cause of Fuji Crash?

LONDON (UPI)—Aviation Minister Fred Mulley said today preliminary investigations showed the BOAC crash on Mt. Fuji that killed 124 persons Saturday was caused by structural failure in the Boeing 707.

"The reason for the failure is not yet known," Mulley told Parliament.

"I have no reason to doubt that the Japanese authorities will conduct an inquiry and I will appoint an accredited representative to participate in it," he said.

Opposition spokesman on aviation affairs Robert Carr said there seemed to be growing public anxiety over recent air-line crashes and urged Mulley to use his influence to press the inquiry and issue a statement as soon as possible.

Mulley promised to do what he could.

AFTER BOOK, CURIOUS THINGS BEGAN TO HAPPEN!

Detectives Hounding Auto Safety Critic

WASHINGTON — A few months after the publication of Ralph Nader's critical book on American automobiles, "Unsafe at Any Speed," detective agencies in Washington, Boston and New York began an investigation into his background and habits.

Did he have a normal sex life? Was he anti-semitic? Did he belong to left-wing political groups? Was he a licensed driver? Was he professionally competent?

Other curious things began happening, according to an article by James Ridgeway in the current issue of The New Republic. Nader was bothered by pointless telephone calls on the eve of his testimony on auto safety before a congressional committee. People began following him.

An attractive brunette solicited his company at a casual meeting in a drug store on Feb. 20. Three days later, he was approached by a blonde in a supermarket who invited him to her apartment to move furniture around.

Investigators questioned his friends, his college professors, and a writer who had reviewed his book. They claimed Nader had applied for a job and they were checking him out. It was a plausible excuse but it was untrue. Nader was not job-hunting.

He was, instead, pursuing his interest in what is wrong with American cars — preparing his testimony for Congress and preparing for a meeting with auto-makers in Detroit.

Was it the auto-makers who had developed this unusual interest in a 32-year-old Connecticut lawyer?

Neither Nader nor reporter Ridgeway could find out.

One investigating firm, Allied Investigative Service of Washington, refused to discuss the matter with Ridgeway initially and then denied it had any interest in Nader.

The Boston detective firm, Management Consultants, brushed off the reporter with: "I am not at liberty to discuss these matters."

The New York firm, Vincent Gillen Associates, of Garden City, admitted asking about Nader for a "client ... considering him for an important job, to do research or something."

Gillen told Ridgeway the investigation is incomplete and "all I can say, it is good for Nader."

Nader, however, does not feel good about it.

"They can't hurt me," he said, "asking about my sex life, my drinking habits and things like that. I'm not vulnerable. But it's a strange thing. Suppose I were married and had several children and someone turned up something embarrassing. It would be intimidation for a writer.

"I think it's wrong, if anyone disagrees with my book or what I've had to say, to turn it into something personal like this. Let them debate the issues, instead of this kind of thing."

Quit NATO, Commonwealth; Join OAS, Says Noted Editor

By ARNOLD EDINBOROUGH
Editor, Saturday Night

Canada cannot stand on its own in the world; without external trade we would be bankrupt; without military allies we would be defenceless.

The aim of our external affairs policy, therefore, must be to choose our allies shrewdly and plan our trading partnerships carefully. Our proximity to the United States means that we must also look for mutual support in these two areas against the overwhelming influence of the U.S.

U.S. Policies

If we ignore this influence we are likely to become involved willy-nilly in those policies which suit our great neighbor but which, despite our many common interests, don't suit us. (Trade with Red China, Cuba and the military involvement in Viet Nam are current examples.)

For years we have had Great Britain as both market and bulwark. Tradition expected it, self-interest urged it. As a senior partner in the Commonwealth (though a reluctant one in the Thirties), we got far more out of that association than we ever put into it.

But Britain's position, both economically and politically, has declined in the last twenty years and the Commonwealth has become so loose and ill-defined an organization as to be useless.

Flickers of Life

There are still some flickers of life in it when it can impose sanctions on Rhodesia but when two member-nations went to war, it was communists who mediated the dispute in Tashkent — hardly a Commonwealth centre.

Aware of this atrophying relationship, it has been Canadian policy to look for a new alignment in the post-war years.

Our first venture was into NATO where we believed,

Public debate over whether Canada should join the Organization of American States is growing and it seems likely that this will soon become a major issue of Canadian foreign policy. Well-known Canadian writer and editor, Arnold Edinborough, in the latest issue of Saturday Night magazine favors membership in the OAS—but he goes further. He asks if Canada should not get out of NATO and diminish the bonds with the Commonwealth.

Against all logic, that Article 2 could be worked out to the mutual economic advantage of the Atlantic community. But the Atlantic community never was a viable entity and we now are faced with the simple fact that a military alliance born in fear disappears with that fear. After all, what elements of economic or ideological policy can possibly be shared by countries as diverse as Portugal, the United States, Greece, Great Britain and Norway?

Even those countries in closer geographical proximity have found that more likely confederations are difficult to work: the European Free Trade Area is a mere cipher, and the much stronger Common Market has not been without serious threats.

There are two other places where we might now look. The first is the Organization of American States. Severe pressure is being exerted from Washington to urge us into this group, and feeling is growing in the department of external affairs that we should join.

On the face of it, such a move would be attractive. If we can no longer have a European or strong Commonwealth connection, then we should try to move into a position of strength in this hemisphere.

Branch Plant

We face some of the same problems as the countries of Latin America. We have a branch plant economy, just as Mexico and Venezuela have. Again, since we have never extended ourselves in aiding underdeveloped nations (our per capita contribution is less than that of Great Britain or the United States) we could surely help develop Latin America, and would be welcomed as partners in such an enterprise.

There is a further reason for considering membership in the OAS. The United States has always treated Latin America in a very high-handed fashion. Their record in New Mexico, Mexico and other places in the last century has been paralleled by their disastrous interventions in Guatemala, Cuba and the Dominican Republic in the last five years.

The United States, founded on revolution, dedicated to anti-colonialism, and passionate in its belief in populist democracy, has never been farther from its traditions than in its Latin American posture.

Perhaps, therefore, if we join the Organization we can build a better case for democracy than the United States has. If we can involve ourselves in the vital reforms which must come in the southern hemisphere, they will be democratic ones — not communist, like Cuba's.

UN Alternative

Admittedly, to opt out of NATO and minimize our involvement in the Commonwealth because neither seems to work, and then get too involved with the OAS which hasn't worked yet, doesn't seem much of an alternative. But the only other one is action at the United Nations.

Just now, that institution is in too disarranged a state for a country the size of Canada to have any effect. The great matters there are the money, the seating of China and the volatility of the new African and Asian nations.

To make any headway against these battles of the giants, there would need to be a solid new grouping of the middle nations. We would need more external strength than we now command to launch any move to achieve that. Maybe an apprenticeship in the OAS would help us towards it.

Clear Objectives

In any case, membership in the OAS would sharpen our external policy, would give us clear objectives in external aid, and above all, if it were properly interpreted to the people of Canada, would give us the kind of external involvement that would lessen our present almost total enmeshment with domestic matters.

In the old days a king being attacked at home would unite his followers by going to attack someone abroad. Is it too idealistic to expect in this century that we can lessen our divisions at home by attacking poverty, hunger and oppression abroad by more humane and longer lasting methods than the armies of old?

I, for one, hope not, and at this stage the OAS looks a more likely bet to start it than the UN.

Arabian Handicrafts Anyone?

The New Republic

Why did Lebanese newspapers think President Johnson's brother-in-law, Antonio J. Taylor of Santa Fe, was not, as Washington said he was, a special consultant on how to market Jordanian handicrafts, but was a secret arms salesman?

The most plausible explanation is that unresolved conflicts have produced a new armaments race in the Middle East, and along with it, rising irrationality.

The three monarchies, Iran, Jordan and Saudi Arabia, are drawing closer together because of pressures at work in the whole area.

Egypt, greatly weakened by the stalemate in the Yemen but eager nevertheless to make her influence felt in Libya and in the Eastern Arab countries, continues to get massive arms from the Soviet Union. Food supplies sent to Cairo by the U.S. enable President Nasser to pledge more of his own country's resources as payment for Soviet arms.

Arms Sought

Syria and Iraq have hopefully applied to the Pentagon for arms, but no answer has yet been forthcoming. So President Aref of Iraq, ever an optimist, sent his brother, Major-General Abdur Rahman Aref, deputy chief of staff, to the Soviet Union for arms. Syria, too, has asked Russia for military hardware.

Saudi Arabia has placed a large contract for aircraft and radar equipment in Britain, with the blessing of the U.S. Jordan is getting 100 Patton tanks. Israel, surrounded by this flood of arms, is negotiating with French private firms for co-operation in building rockets.

Why do the Arabs want more planes, guns, rockets, tanks? Because of Israel in the first place, in the second place against each other, and thirdly for fighting minorities like the Kurds.

There is a fourth reason. No Arab regime can survive whose armies have been defeated in the field. The Jews defeated King Farouk; Nasser was only saved by the temporary American-Soviet alliance. General Kassem of Iraq was overthrown because his armies had been bruised by the Kurds.

Weak Position

The Iraq president has accused the Persians of supporting the Kurdish rebels. Teheran contemptuously denied this. The fighting goes on. Iraq is in a weak position because the Russians are reluctant to spoil their improved relations with Iran for the sake of the Iraqis.

As for President Nasser, American experts who have just been to Yemen say whatever happens there will be a disaster for him. If he has to withdraw his defeated troops, he will have them on his hands, resentful, underpaid and contemptuous of their officers. If he lets them fight on they will again be defeated. New skirmishes have already started in and around Bahrain.

In Jordan, meanwhile, the Palestine Liberation Army continues to conscript young men, and the UN is going to reduce its Scandinavian force in the vital Gaza Strip by 200 men, to save money.

Handicrafts, anyone?

By ESCOTT REID

(Extracts from an address to the English-Speaking Union in Toronto. Mr. Reid is principal of Glendon College, York University, Toronto. He was Canadian high commissioner in India from 1952 to 1957; ambassador to Germany from 1958 to 1962; and director of the World Bank's operations in South Asia and the Middle East from 1962 to 1965.)

ESCOTT REID

Some years ago we used to call the countries which need international aid, the underdeveloped countries. This was not considered polite and they were then called the less developed countries or even the LDCs.

Now the fashionable term is developing countries. I am not going to call them by any of these terms. I shall strike a blow for direct, simple English by calling them poor countries.

There exists today a widespread uneasy feeling that the world has reached some kind of crisis in the relations between rich and poor countries.

Without Hope

There is a wide-spread uneasy feeling that if the rich and the poor countries cannot together resolve this crisis in a reasonably sensible way within a reasonable time, most of the terribly poor of the world — and two out of three men, women and children in the world are terribly poor — most of the terribly poor of the world will be left without much reason to believe in the possibility of a much better life for themselves and for their children.

The consequences of this can be profound. The problem of the economic development of poor countries is one of the two great problems of the last third of the twentieth century on which we are now entering. It is comparable in importance to the problem of the relations between the Western world and China.

Levelling Off

One of the main reasons for the present feeling of crisis about the relations of rich and poor countries is that the amount of financial resources moving from the rich countries to the poor countries has been levelling off. The gross flow now is about the same as it was in 1961.

The rich countries have got a great deal richer in the past five years. Their combined annual gross national products have probably gone up by about $40 billion. They have not shared any of this new wealth of $40 billion a year with the poor countries.

What order of magnitude of aid is required? The net official flow of long term capital from the rich members of the World Bank to the poor members is now about $6 billion a year or about six-tenths of one per cent of their combined gross national products.

UNITED NATIONS — The African bloc — the most powerful voting section of United Nations membership — is becoming increasingly disorganized and dishevelled as the number of coups on the African continent mounts.

The fall of Ghana's President Kwame Nkrumah had the African diplomats here torn between delight at the downfall of an unpopular dictator, and fear that their own governments may suffer a similar fate.

In the third-floor press section of the United Nations there is the familiar stream of junior officials of the affected country trailing in to the offices of Reuters and other news agencies, trying to find out what is going on in their own capital. This has been a frequent event in the past three months, the only change being the nationality of the diplomats from Congo to Dahomey, the Central African Republic, Upper Volta, Nigeria and now Ghana.

In almost every case the dramatic changes in government have made little difference to the UN diplomats' jobs. Ambassadors and their staffs have remained in New York posts, usually because — in the case of recently-

It is important that the people of rich countries and international officials concerned with international economic aid realize the weight of the tragic burden borne by the political leaders of the poor countries who know that, if their country is to lift itself out of its poverty, they must hold down increases in consumption by the poor; they must put off doing much to reduce inequalities and inequities among regions and among groups within regions; they must sacrifice today's goods for tomorrow's hopes.

As for the outside experts who participate in investigations and in dialogues on development with poor countries, much is required of them. For the giving of advice is a delicate and a hazardous occupation.

Four Reminders

The giver of advice can usefully remind himself of four things. First, that human judgment is fallible.

Second, that luck or providence or the unpredictable plays a large role in economic development.

Third, that while it is a good thing for poor people to have more to eat and to wear, better places to live in, more and better nurses, doctors and teachers, and less illness, it is a better thing for them to have these goods without sacrificing those ancient values of their society which can give them a feeling of belonging to a group, a sense of dignity and the possibility of serenity.

The fourth thing which a giver of advice to a poor country can usefully remind himself of is that, even if final truth has been revealed to him, he is not Moses laying down the law from Mount Sinai. He is a partner speaking to a free and equal partner.

For him, success is measured not by wisdom of the advice he gives but by how much of his wise advice is accepted. His task is one of persuasion. When he intervenes with advice his "intervention should be in the least abrasive, the least corrosive way possible."

Soviet Economic Plan Shows Sights Lowered

THE ECONOMIST

Russia has lowered its sights with a bang. This is the burden of the draft economic plan for 1966-70 that Mr. Khrushchev presented to his central committee.

On the face of it the plan looks fine. It assumes that the gross output of Russia's industry (according to the rather esoteric Russian calculations) will grow by almost half in the next five years. The increase in the national income as a whole will be smaller, between 3.8 and 4.1 per cent; this reflects the shortcomings of Russian farming.

Narrow Gap

But one of the objectives of the plan is to narrow the gap between industrial and agricultural output, as well as the gap between the output of heavy and light industry. Again according to Russian forecasts, the production per head of such basic items as steel and electricity should be slightly higher in 1970 than the current British level. Russian consumers are promised that such things as television sets and refrigerators will be then cease to be reserved for the privileged.

Cars will still be for the lucky few; but the planned increase in their production suggests that in the 1970s Russia may begin to become a country of private motorists.

So far, so good. It is only when the new plan is compared with older Khrushchevian targets that the drastic downward turn hits the eye.

On October 18, 1961, Mr. Khrushchev told his 22nd party congress about the society of plenty in which the Russian people would be living by 1980. He also gave details of the intermediate stage, which would be reached by 1970, and it is these figures that were so strikingly higher than Mr. Khrushchev's new 1970 targets.

New Rhythm

The sharp reduction does not apply only to farming, which everybody knows is in a constant crisis. It does not only reveal that the much-publicized drive to expand the chemical industry has been slowed down drastically. It shows a general change of rhythm, a slackening of pace throughout the economy.

No government that is even partly dependent on economic success for its popularity enjoys having to lower its sights. The extent to which Russia's new leaders have been forced to lower theirs makes it easier to understand why, in the last few years, we have heard the echoes of a rolling debate about the whole system of planning, about centralization and managerial freedom, about the introduction of profit as the main criterion of efficiency, and all sorts of other reforms designed to reduce waste, to speed up the completion of new investment, and to produce things that are actually wanted.

Just about every target has been cut. Whereas in 1961 Mr. Khrushchev assumed for the next five years an annual rate of industrial growth of about

NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV

12 per cent, the new plan brings it down to around 8 per cent. For heavy industry the drop is from 12.5 to 8.5 per cent. These proportions run parallel with the reductions for individual items.

Housing Off

The fall in the planned production of cement provides confirmation that the housing program although still ambitious, has lost its original drive. Particularly striking is the reduction in the target for natural gas and, to a lesser extent, for crude oil. Neither in the 1961 figures nor in the new plan was any big increase in the output of coal envisaged, so there is no great reduction here; and the lower targets for oil and gas thus mean that the modernization of Russia's fuel supplies — the base of the whole economy — will proceed more slowly.

The modernization of the economy was also the chief justification for Mr. Khrushchev's drive to produce more chemicals. It was objected at the time that, under his scheme, chemicals would absorb too much of the funds available for investment.

This controversy now has only a historical interest. The figures show that the new objectives bear little relation to the old. Nor does this setback for the modernizers represent a victory for the champions of steel and heavy engineering. For the period between 1966 and 1970 Mr. Khrushchev forecast a doubling of machine-building output. The new plan cuts it down to about 65 per cent.

For consumer goods there is less to go on. By 1970, Russian consumers are now promised 2½ instead of 3½ pairs of shoes a year, and 25 square metres of all kinds of fabrics instead of the 55 promised by Mr. Khrushchev. The planned annual rate of growth in light industry, again according to Russian calculations, is cut from 11.5 to 7.6 per cent. The only item that seems to have been revised upwards instead of downwards is cars.

Car Anti-Social

Mr. Khrushchev used to claim that Russia's restraint in the production of consumer goods was part of a policy. The private car was anti-social, he argued, was to jump straight into the era of air transport, combined with a system of car hire.

Mr. Khrushchev now plans to increase the output of cars from 200,000 in 1965 to between 700,000 and 800,000 in 1970. Admittedly, even then, with an annual supply of only three cars for every thousand people, the car will remain the privilege of the bureaucrat and the manager.

But, as with other consumer goods, the authorities will find it difficult to restrict this privilege for long. The Russians seem to have caught this "western disease": it is a highly significant indication.

THE GALLUP POLL

Whopping Majority Say 'No' to Federal Election

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Canadians give a clear-cut mandate to the government — no more elections for awhile. Almost eight-in-ten (79 per cent) of the voters are obviously fed up with elections.

About one-in-ten (11 per cent) would favor another general election soon.

The people have been consistent in their wish not to have the government run to the polls every two years or so. This bears out the fact that a majority government is not as important to the voters as it is to the members of Parliament. In 1964 and 1965 more than half of the people wanted the government to carry on. Today that number has increased to the whopping majority of more than three-quarters of the electors.

The Question: "As you may know, the present government in Ottawa does not have an overall majority of seats. Which alternative do you think the government should follow — carry on a government until they have to have an election, or have an election as soon as possible?"

FUJI WIND WARNING TOO LATE?

Four Nations Join Japan Crash Probes

TOKYO (AP) — Aviation experts from four countries began intensive investigations today following three successive airline disasters in the Tokyo area that killed 321 persons.

Japanese officials also launched urgent studies of aviation safety in Japan and renewed calls for a new airport.

Heavy rains on the lower slopes of Mount Fuji, site of a British Overseas Airways Corp. crash Saturday that killed all 124 aboard, hampered studies being made of the twisted wreckage.

Photographs of the BOAC jet which spun out of a clear sky showed the plane began disintegrating while falling. Smoke trailed from the full length of both wings.

Pieces of the Canadian Pacific Airlines Douglas DC-8 jet that crashed Friday in a fog at Tokyo Airport were being picked over by more experts. That crash killed 64 of the 72 persons aboard.

On Feb. 4 a Boeing 727 jet operated by All Nippon Airways crashed in Tokyo Harbor and killed all 133 persons aboard. It was the worst crash in history involving a single plane.

Eighteen Canadian residents were among those who perished in the CPA crash. Theodore Vaskovich, 53, an engineer from Toronto was the only Canadian listed among the BOAC crash victims, who included 89 Americans. There were no Canadians in an earlier crash of the Boeing 727.

E. W. Ogden, general manager for the Far East for Canadian Pacific Airlines, told a press conference the company is considering the question of compensating for victims of the crash Friday.

In the meantime, Ogden said, CPA is giving 400,000 yen ($1,111) to the five Japanese victims as a voluntary condolence payment in accordance with Japanese custom.

The investigators arriving here were from Canada, the United States and Britain. John G. Adams, a member of the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board, said he would study the three crashes, all of which involved American-made jets.

Identification of the BOAC and CPA victims continued. Japanese authorities started hearings on the disasters. Testimony was heard from airline pilots and air controllers.

Transportation Minister Torata Nakamura announced that Prime Minister Eisaku Sato had instructed him to speed up plans for a new airport.

The BOAC plane, bound for Hong Kong and London, flew past Mount Fuji because many of the passengers had expressed a desire to see the landmark. It was a clear day but warnings of high winds near the plane took off.

DISCOVER TWO PISTOLS

Two small-calibre pistols were discovered in the BOAC wreckage, but police expressed doubt they had anything to do with the crash. They were checking to see if the pistols had been declared with customs when the owner or owners entered Japan.

A U.S. Air Force C-120 Hercules transport ran off the runway at the Tachikawa base Sunday night and plunged into a rice field. None of the five men aboard was hurt.

Available information indicated weather conditions may have been partially to blame for the crashes Friday and Saturday.

FLAMING HOLOCAUST CAUSED BY HAIR SPRAY?

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A woman sprays her hair. The woman sitting beside her lights a cigarette at the same moment. And in seconds the Viscount airliner on which they are riding bursts into a flaming holocaust.

Passengers panic as the blaze spreads through the cabin. Some pour into the cockpit and, in their fear, interfere with the crew trying to battle the fire. One man knocks out a window and leaps from the plane, 300 feet in the air. Then the plane crashes into a Tennessee hillside and explodes.

WHAT HAPPENED?

This is the picture United Airlines paints in a report submitted to the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) as to what may have happened just before one of its planes crashed July 9, 1964. The crash killed all 38 persons aboard.

The strongly worded report rejects the theory that CAB investigators are reported to be advancing — that the fire was started by an electrical fault in the plane's hold and spread into the cabin.

The agency's bureau of safety will make its final report "within several weeks," according to an agency official, who would not comment on the report.

The United report says the fire started in the cabin of the Viscount, which took off from Philadelphia and stopped at Washington on its way to Knoxville, Tenn. The document pinpoints the cause of fire as combustion of a liquid hydrocarbon that was probably carried aboard by a passenger.

Such highly combustible fluid is not normally found in the plane's cabin.

THEORIES

Although a United spokesman was careful to point out that "no one will ever really know" what happened just before the crash, he said the airline felt that combustion of hair spray or lighter fluid, both of which contain hydrocarbon, was one of the most plausible theories.

Flash burns and soot, which the airline says were caused by the burning of a liquid hydrocarbon, were found on the body of the man who jumped from the plane two miles from the crash site.

The airline bases its argument primarily on this and its contention that the pilot, who could not radio because radio systems were damaged or because he was too busy fighting the terrified passengers and fire, took measures to fight a fire in the cabin, rather than in the hold.

COSTLY CHANGES?

United fears that if CAB accepts the electrical fire theory, it will require costly and, from the airline's point of view, unnecessary modifications to the Viscounts. Similar electrical problems with the Constellation caused that aircraft to be grounded in 1946. United emphasizes that the Viscount was specifically engineered to avoid such electrical problems and says the plane has flown six million miles without any incident involving such a fire.

HOME GARDEN

'Instant' Beauty With Little Effort

By HILDA BEASTALL

Today we demand "instant" gardens which are labor-saving yet satisfying in appearance.

A difficult assignment to fill, yet thought-provoking.

Many persons who wish for such a garden make a beginning by taking down existing trees, having the lot made level to the house walls, and then start the landscaping.

When a property has trees, either native or cultivated, it is a wise course to live with them a year, deciding their merits and demerits through the four seasons.

Undergrowth beneath the trees which appears as just a mess in early March, may reveal a wealth of native flowers before the end of April.

A judicious cutting out of what is obviously dead, woody material, will make it possible to see and assess the value of each and every plant that remains.

If spring reveals no treasures beneath the trees, all the debris can be cleared out, making areas for planting of favorite cultivated things suitable to the existing conditions.

A rotary mower takes the labor out of much of this rough clearing, and rough grasses can be kept under control easily with its aid. It is surprising how attractive field grasses are when cut occasionally during the season.

If trees are missing, plant your selected specimens as soon as a decision is made. They can be growing while the clean-up work is in progress.

Certain plants can be used for interest during the growing period of the trees. Later, as shade develops in the area and the character of the garden changes, they can be relinquished without regrets.

If the garden is small, choose light airy trees, remembering that they will be comparatively near the house. Many solidly evergreen trees would be out of scale, but one alone, as background for deciduous (leaf-losing) flowering trees would lend the air of permanence so necessary to home surroundings.

Leafs Take A Good One 'For Road'

Seattle 2, Victoria 6

By DOUG PEDEEN

"That one Saturday was a good one for the road," coach Frank Mario was saying at Memorial Arena this morning while sending Victoria Maple Leafs through a brisk workout.

"It showed we are coming out of our slump and I'll be disappointed if we don't win four of our eight games."

Those were perhaps brave words for a Western Hockey League coach about to take his club on an eight-game road trip that includes six interlocking games in a rugged tour of American League cities.

However, Frank saw a lot he liked at the arena Saturday when the Leafs twice hustled from behind and then bombed Seattle Totems with four second-period goals in less than four minutes. The explosion ended the scoring and the Leafs settled for a 6-2 triumph to climb within five points of first-place Portland Buckaroos, 5-4 losers in overtime Saturday night in San Francisco.

"It was a good team effort," continued Mario. "Our defence looked better once our wingers started skating with opposing wingers after the first 10 minutes."

"Parenteau played well and that means we should have a solid third line. I'll be able to keep our other two lines intact. "If this club keeps skating like it did Saturday, we're going to win some of those road games. When we set the pace we control the game."

GETS BIG GOAL

Dave Parenteau is the rookie centre who got a chance for regular work when Larry Keenan suffered a wrist-fracture last week. He appeared right at home and he fired a big goal for the Leafs when he evened the score at 2-2 late in the first period.

After five minutes of the second session, school was out for the Totems. In the space of three minutes and 25 seconds, Aut Erickson, Bob Barlow, Lou Jankowski and Gordie Redahl had rapped shots behind bewildered Seattle goalie Jim McLeod and the Leafs never faltered the rest of the way. They even held the Totems to one direct shot on rookie goalie Gary Holland while playing two men short for a minute and 42 seconds later in the second session.

Barlow also connected in the first period and his evening's work gave him 30 goals, making it four successive seasons he has scored 30 or more.

WHO NEEDS GUYLE?

The second tally was an important one for the winger who came to the Leafs from Seattle last summer amid hints that his production would drop with separation from Totem centre Guyle Fielder.

"That makes it 30," commented Barlow. "One more and I'll have one more than I got with Fielder last year. That should keep them quiet in Seattle."

It turned out to be a completely unhappy weekend for the Totems, who returned home Sunday and dropped a 2-1 overtime joust in an interlocking game with Baltimore Clippers.

Leafs leave here Tuesday and open their road-schedule Wednesday in San Francisco, where Mario will ease one of his problems. Veteran John Henderson, stand-by goalie for the Leafs, is expected to join the team, filling the vacancy caused by the departure of Al Miller.

Miller has an even record in three games with the Oilers, one loss, one tie and a 7-4 win Sunday night over St. Louis. Leafs return home on March 23 for a game against the third-place Vancouver Canucks, a club the Victorians now lead by 11 points.

If they win four of their eight, they won't have to worry about the Canucks. And they might have a chance to catch the Bucks.

Wayne Connelly ended the San Francisco - Portland overtime duel with a tip-in at 3:45 of the sudden-death period. It was his 33rd goal of the year. But Portland came from behind four times in regulation play.

Curling's Elite Opens Play for Brier Trophy

HALIFAX (CP)—Teams from all provinces—two from Ontario—launched one of Canada's major sports spectacles today as 11 rinks began play in the Canadian curling championships.

Forty of the 44 curlers participating in the 37th edition of the annual play for the Brier Trophy at the Halifax Forum today.

Herb Lerner's Manitoba rink from Winnipeg drew the opening-round bye. Good crowds were expected at the five-day round-robin tournament.

Don Oyler's Kentville, N.S., crew gave Halifaxians plenty to cheer about when the tournament was last held here in 1951 as they swept to the province's second title since the whole affair started in 1927 with a perfect 10-0 record. But Nova Scotia has been able to break even in only two of the last six years.

Manitoba has won 16 championships in 36 years, but Saskatchewan has held the edge in the last seven with all five of its victories, beginning with Garret Campbell's 1955 triumph at Regina.

Saskatchewan, a favorite this year with 23 years' experience in national competition among the four members. Campbell and his brother Glen are back in harness, bringing to mind the 1955 Avonlea team of four Campbell brothers.

But McKenzie and Ballard did not think the remarks by Clay, a Black Muslim, bothered Canadians as much as Americans.

McKenzie and Ballard will be seen at the University of Victoria gymnasium.

They will be one of five teams bidding for the crown in a round-robin tournament that opens tonight. Vancouver, Marpole, Montreal, Edmonton's University of Alberta Pandas and Victoria Vikesites round out the tournament roster.

"We are not a tall team," agrees coach Earl Begg. "We rely on positional play and speed."

WHERE'S THAT DURN GOAL?

Dad didn't score a goal, not just any goal but his 51st goal, and Bobby Hull Jr. looked mad enough to eat a hockey net. Hull Jr. sat in Maple Leaf Gardens Saturday, as frustrated as his dad when Toronto Maple Leafs drenched Chicago Black Hawks 5-0. See stories, summaries on Page 13.

Toronto's Gardens Set To Offer Clay-Terrell

TORONTO (CP)—The world heavyweight championship fight between Cassius Clay and Ernie Terrell staggered into Toronto Sunday and found a haven.

Harold Ballard, executive vice-president of Maple Leaf Gardens, announced Sunday night the fight will be held in his building March 29.

The reaction was mixed. In Pleasantville, N.J., Terrell said he couldn't care less.

"I won't believe it until I see Clay in the same ring with me," said the World Boxing Association champion.

The fight has already been run out of New York and Chicago and last week couldn't get into Montreal or its suburb, Verdun, Que. After Montreal rejected it, places like Huron, S.D., Sorel, Que., Manchester, N.H., and Cobourg, Ont., loomed as prospective sites.

But Ballard, with an arena capable of seating 18,000 for boxing, met Saturday with Robert Arum, a New York lawyer representing Main Bout Inc., which controls closed-circuit television rights for the bout. By Sunday night he was able to announce that contracts for the 15-round bout were to be signed at noon today.

But there were one or two details to be cleared up first.

Will McKenzie of Toronto, Ontario athletic commissioner, said Sunday night he wanted to consult Ontario Labor Minister Leslie Rowntree today before the contract signing. The athletic commission comes under the minister's jurisdiction.

"Normally I don't always seek certification from Mr. Rowntree," McKenzie said, "but I owe him the courtesy this time on two counts."

"In the first place, this is a world championship bout. I also want to clear up whatever political overtones the government might be sensitive to concerning Clay."

McKenzie's reference was to remarks made by Clay opposing the United States' role in the war in Viet Nam. The Louisville Lip, widely regarded as the champ since his victories over former titlist Sonny Liston, is scheduled to go into the U.S. armed services soon.

But McKenzie and Ballard did not think the remarks by Clay, a Black Muslim, bothered Canadians as much as Americans.

McKenzie and Ballard will be seen at the University of Victoria gymnasium.

They will be one of five teams bidding for the crown in a round-robin tournament that opens tonight. Vancouver, Marpole, Montreal, Edmonton's University of Alberta Pandas and Victoria Vikesites round out the tournament roster.

"We are not a tall team," agrees coach Earl Begg. "We rely on positional play and speed."

Begg's tallest player, Chris Brass, isn't even a starter and he flaunts tradition by starting one of his shorter players, Wendell Connors.

"She isn't a big scorer, but she is the key to our defence," Begg explains.

Hamilton boasts a record of 17 wins and five losses. Three of the wins came in the round-robin Ontario playdowns

AT THE MOVIES

With NORMAN CRIBBENS

DARLING
Victoria Premiere
Fox Cinema

Movie critics have showered laurels on this off-beat English satire since it was first shown in London, New York and other large centres last year.

In consequence there were block-length queues outside the Fox Cinema at both performances Saturday night. Some were shocked, a few were disgusted but the majority seemed to like what they saw.

Disregarding its morals, I would rate Darling as a brilliant, relentless and often very witty satire on London's varied social sets and some of the more grotesque types to be found in all big cities.

With ingenious camera work, it follows the amatory career of a pretty photographer's model who moves from bed to bed in pursuit of some kind of ambition or sex fulfillment. Yet the generally unsavory theme never lapses into cheap sensationalism.

As the amoral heroine, Julie Christie is a fascinating, vivacious creature who brings a great deal of animal spirit to her fleeting love affairs. But what impels her behaviour is none too clear.

As a youngster, she's bright, wholesome and beautiful. As an adult, she quickly tires of marriage to an undistinguished young husband and latches onto a bookish TV commentator (Dirk Bogarde) who deserts his wife and children to go and live with her.

Later she trades him in for a cold-blooded, advertising executive (Laurence Harvey), who turns her beauty into a publicity poster for chocolate with "fair-tale centres."

Darling's own fairy tale ends, many escapades later, when she finds luxury, boredom and neglect as the wife of a wealthy Italian prince living in a sprawling palazzo.

What the film seems to lack is depth and clarity of characterization. Both the TV commentator and the advertising tycoon are played with style and eloquence. But they are physically and emotionally ambiguous, as is the debonair Italian prince.

Darling is more to be commended as a study in social and moral decadence.

Deeply ironic, it throws a fierce light on pompous, pretentious society gatherings made up of soap barons, sycophants, homosexuals, hedonists and barflies, and contrasts their behavior with that of stiff, middle-class suburbanites and the bewildered man in the street.

Some of the scenes are frankly distasteful but, overall, this is a fascinatingly clever film which holds interest throughout.

MOSCOW (AP)—Saturday was the 13th anniversary of Stalin's death and at least one person in this de-Stalinized Soviet capital remembered. During the day someone put a small bouquet on his grave outside the Kremlin wall. There was no Soviet observance of the anniversary.

'TIME SPED BY TOO QUICKLY DURING EXCELLENT CONCERT'

By JOAN MASON HURLEY

Like educated conversation at a dinner table, chamber music requires a certain degree of cultivation in those present.

Enthusiasts, in fact, may even prefer it to the noisy banquet of 75 instruments all speaking at once on disparate levels.

I was glad to be a guest on Sunday afternoon at the McPherson Theatre when the Musical Arts presented a concert given by the faculty of the Victoria School of Music. The hour and a half which it lasted sped by all too quickly.

First on the program was Beethoven's delightful Trio in B-flat with Hans Siegrist, cello; Robin Wood, piano, and featuring Barry Moncur, clarinet, who produced an impeccable performance with tone both smooth and mellow.

This work, purely academic in form, embodies the very essence of chamber music. The melody chases itself from one instrument to another in lovely trilling passages. The slow movement was notable for the fabulous quality of the piano playing, the like of which one is not accustomed to hear, generally speaking in Victoria. The third movement was truly a conversation, with the witticisms of each solo instrument being appreciatively repeated by the other two.

Next was Mozart's difficult Quartet for Oboe and Strings. The writing for the oboe in this work is of an ambitious, nay virtuosic, quality. The earnest young soloist, 18-year-old John de Jarnatt, appeared understandably nervous, but he executed the intricate chromatic scales and cunningly juxtaposed high and low notes for the most part exceedingly competently, and his skill was enthusiastically cally applauded by the audience. Playing the less showy parts were Jean Angers, violin; Kenneth Copeland, viola, and Hans Siegrist, cello.

I felt that Mr. Siegrist had the most unrewarding task of the afternoon. He played in every number, but his instrument merely built a foundation on which the others soared to heights.

This was particularly the case in the Dvorak Trio, Op. 90 (Dumky). Mr. Angers seemed to have all the fun with his violin alternately singing impassioned gypsy melodies, sobbing vocative laments and sighing lyrical love ballads. The piano backed him up. But finally Mr. Siegrist had a theme of his own in the third movement, to which he did full justice.

This kind of pot-pourri or Irish Stew (to mix nationalities) of Czechoslovakian folk-tunes does not for me hold the appeal of the absolute art of Beethoven.

A note of comedy was injected when the musicians came on stage and Mr. Siegrist's music was found to be misplaced. The audience was gently amused by Mr. Wood until it was found, and everyone came away feeling that it had been a "lovely concert."

He said some classes taught by team-teaching methods include as many as 350 students and there are seminar groups with as few as 15 students.

About one-third of the students' time is unscheduled and independent study is encouraged. Mr. Carlson said students use their time well and discipline problems have almost disappeared.

A picturesque view of the ocean, windswept shores and islands lend a pleasing atmosphere to your dining and dancing. Specially selected dishes, combined with the dancing music of Beethoven-Langton, blend in to make your evening complete.

DO-SI-DO EVENTS

Work Off Spring Energy!

By CANDIDE TEMPLE

Top spot on the square dance calendar this month is taken by the Daffodil Dance, to be held March 30 at Esquimalt Jr. High School.

Now in its third year, the Daffodil dance ranks high among events which square dancers really look forward to in the Victoria area.

Sponsored by the Squarecrows, a local square dance club, the dance is planned to let do-si-doers work off a little spring energy and usher in the new season in style.

Setting for the dance, of course, will be masses of daffodils, Saanich-grown and banded up everywhere to lend the hall a festive touch.

Time and date for the dance have been picked so as not to interfere with other activities. It will be mid-week, Wednesday, so as not to conflict with other square dance groups, and runs early, 8 p.m. to 10:30.

Daffodil dance tickets are $1 a couple.

Ucluelet

A freak "twister" struck Ucluelet on the west coast of Vancouver Island, this morning causing about $100,000 damage to property.

There were no reports of any injuries but at least four buildings including Ucluelet Secondary School were damaged. Ucluelet Village Chairman, Dick Pool, an insurance agent, said the twister cut a swath about 400 feet wide and 1,000 feet long through the centre of town.

The blow hit at 10:45 a.m. today and was accompanied by hail, thunder and lightning.

After ripping through this small island community it headed out across the city's harbor.

Reports of blown-out windows and damaged roofs were numerous.

WINDOWS GONE

Mr. Poole said the wind loosened the school's roof at the corners and blew out all windows.

No students were reported injured "but the vacuum created by the wind hurt their ears," he said.

The wind hurled a 600-lb. timber which forms part of the school's fencing into the Ucluelet Athletic Club Hall about 60 feet away.

About a quarter of the hall's roof was blown into bush 300 yards away.

The town's firehall roof was lifted partially from the building but came to rest in its original position when the whirlwind swept out to sea.

Mr. Pool said he had no idea of the wind's speed and added no wind funnel could be seen.

'PRETTY DARK'

"It was pretty dark at the time," said the village commissioner.

A two-car garage was blown 100 yards into Ucluelet harbor and was swept a further 200 yards into the bay.

A six-inch spike flew into a schoolroom occupied by a typing class and was embedded in a bulletin board.

QUAKES KILL 15

ANKARA (AP)—Fifteen persons were killed in earthquakes which shook widely separated regions of east and northeast Turkey early today, the state radio network reported.

The Central Meteorology Bureau said the quakes appeared to have been centred in the province of Erzurum, about 150 miles southwest of the Russian border.

Tremors described as "mild to fairly sharp" also were felt in Siirt and Mus provinces and two Black Sea provinces to the north.

SENATOR WARNS:

'Real Danger
Of China War'FULBRIGHT
... orders hearings

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator J. W. Fulbright said Sunday night there is present danger of war with China and announced early U.S. Senate hearings on that Communist-ruled country in an effort to lessen the peril.

The Arkansas Democrat, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee and a critic of U.S. policy in Viet Nam, called in a statement for a searching effort "to increase our understanding of China."

He said that might alter the "fatal expectancy" of war which he asserted is held by Chinese leaders and by some American officials.

Fulbright announced the group will begin Tuesday a series of hearings aimed at increasing public knowledge about China.

He said before fresh political and military decisions are made on Southeast Asia it is essential to try to understand the Chinese and their leaders.

SEES REAL DANGER

"The danger of war is real," he said. "It is real because China is ruled by ideological dogmatists who will soon have nuclear weapons at their disposal and who, though are more ferocious in words than in actions, nonetheless are intensely hostile to the United States."

"In the short run the danger of war between China and America is real because an 'open-ended' war in Viet Nam can bring the two great powers into conflict with each other, by Continued on Page 2

SPENCER:

'I Never Betrayed
My Country'

OTTAWA (CP)—Victor Spencer appeared on a nation-wide television program Sunday night to deny ever spying for the Russians. But he admitted having made a "mistake."

Spencer, subject of headlined House of Commons debate as an alleged spy fired from the postal service, refused to blame anyone for his situation.

The 62-year-old former postal clerk was interviewed in Vancouver by Jack Webster on the CBC program This Hour Has Seven Days.

He refused to say under direct questioning whether he had received $3,000 to $4,000 from Russian Embassy officials as stated in the Commons by Justice Minister Pearson.

But he added: "I never betrayed my country."

He admitted being guilty "of being friendly" to Russia, being a member of the Canada-Soviet Friendship Society, and having the desire to travel to Russia. He also welcomed the judicial inquiry Prime Minister Pearson has announced to investigate his firing.

OTTAWA (CP)—Mr. Justice Dalton Wells, of the Ontario Court of Appeals has been appointed a one-man commission to inquire into the George Victor Spencer spy case, Prime Minister Pearson announced today.

He said he would "like the mystery to be cleared up," perhaps an indication that Spencer himself would like the scope of the inquiry extended to include not only his treatment by the government but the activities over which he was dismissed. The half-bald, bespectacled Spencer smoked heavily during the interview. He kept his head down and appeared extremely nervous and hesitant.

He spoke vaguely of wide studies of research by doctors in many countries that had helped himself and his mother, a "great fund of knowledge of treatment of human beings in sickness."

The studies helped him stand up to difficulties since he was fired last New Year's Eve, he said. "Do you feel your rights were violated as a Canadian citizen and decorated war veteran," Mr. Spencer asked.

"No," Spencer replied. "There's nothing in this life perfect. I've made mistakes..."

Had his actions been wrongly interpreted by authorities? "The authorities haven't misinterpreted what has happened," Spencer replied.

He could see that what he had done could possibly be embarrassing to the government. But he wanted a full questioning "so that all these things can be cleared up."

Businessman
Must Die

SAIGON (UPI)—South Viet Nam's new court for economic crimes today convicted a wealthy Saigon businessman of price speculation, hoarding and bribing and sentenced him to death.

Ta Vinh, 35, a Chinese merchant who directed the Sui Hing Import-Export Co., was found guilty after an all-day trial by three military officers serving as judges of the special court.

The court was created after Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky promised to wage war on hoarders and profiteers who have been blamed for much of Viet Nam's economic ills, including rampant inflation. Ky reportedly promised President Lyndon Johnson at last month's Honolulu conference to speed efforts to clean up corruption.

Ta Vinh, plump and bespectacled, was the first defendant to face the red-robed judges. When the trial opened, his wife and several of their eight children rushed up as he took his place in the courtroom.

Failure?

LONDON (UPI)—Aviation Minister Fred Mulley said today preliminary investigations showed the BOAC crash on Mt. Fuji that killed 124 persons Saturday was caused by structural failure in the Boeing 707. "The reason for the failure is not yet known," Mulley told Parliament.

"I have no reason to doubt that the Japanese authorities will conduct an inquiry and I will appoint an accredited representative to participate in it," he said.

Opposition spokesman on aviation affairs Robert Carr said there seemed to be growing public anxiety over recent airliner crashes and urged Mulley to use his influence to press the inquiry and issue a statement as soon as possible.

Mulley promised to do what he could.

Bows Again
To Pressure

OTTAWA (UPI)—Prime Minister Lester Pearson bowed today for the second consecutive day to strong opposition pressure by announcing a judicial inquiry will be held into all aspects of this country's security operations to determine if they are adequate to meet present-day needs.

At the same time, Pearson announced that Justice Dalton Courtwright Wells of Toronto will conduct the investigation promised last Friday into the dismissal of former Vancouver postal worker George Victor Spencer.

The two inquiries will be entirely separate, Pearson said.

He made the announcement as the Commons tensely awaited word whether Justice Minister Lucien Cardin would resign over the Spencer case. But Pearson made no reference to it through the early part of his statement.

Cardin sat slumped in his second-row seat during the question period and during the announcement. His face, flushed and strained, rested in hands cupped in a prayer-like pose.

Cardin and other Quebec Liberals have been reported unhappy with the decision to call the inquiry into handling of the Spencer case after the government initially vigorously opposed the move.

The Spencer and security investigations meant almost complete Liberal capitulation to sustained opposition resistance that has forced the government to the brink of financial disaster.

Justice Minister
May Step Down

(Times News Services)

OTTAWA—A crisis atmosphere pervaded Parliament Hill today.

The Commons began a new week amid hints of scandal involving the former Conservative government and the possible resignation of present Justice Minister Lucien Cardin.

One report suggested Prime Minister Pearson himself may step down.

The government is faced with a serious financial crisis. It has no money and must get the remainder of this year's estimates passed today.

The Toronto Star says that if Conservative opposition continues "the only way the government can get money to pay its bills is to dissolve Parliament—or to get a new leader for whom the Tories will pass the estimates."

The Star story said "moderates" in the Conservative party were attempting to avoid a showdown but Opposition Leader Diefenbaker is adamant.

"If Cardin's departure is not enough to soothe the angry opposition parties, informed observers speculate Prime Minister Pearson himself might have to resign to prevent another election..." the Star said.

Following a cabinet meeting this morning, Prime Minister Pearson said "no question of any resignation" arose.

Just before Pearson came out, Justice Minister Cardin emerged from the Centre Block cabinet room, and with a tight face said: "I have no answer to give you at all," when asked if he was resigning.

SOOTHE ANGER

Parliament Hill buzzed with rumors that Cardin may resign his justice portfolio in an attempt to soothe the opposition's anger over the government's handling of the Spencer spy case.

Cardin was placed in an awkward position when the prime minister reversed his position and granted the opposition's request for an in-camera inquiry in the Spencer case.

Pearson met with the cabinet to approve the terms of reference of a judicial inquiry into the dismissal of George Victor Spencer, 57, from his civil service job after alleged spying activities.

The Spencer case triggered an angry, one-sentence bombshell from Cardin in the Commons over a sex-and-security case — "The Monsignor" or "Munsinger" affair.

... 'no answer'

The justice minister's name-dropping conjured up the ghost of Olga Munzinger, a beautiful East German girl reputed to have had a torrid liaison with a minister of a former Conservative government while she was employed in a Communist embassy in Ottawa.

Some reports have also indicated Olga may have been entangled with more than one minister of the same cabinet. All reports agree the woman was "a real dish," and some describe her as having been a former beauty queen.

The Globe and Mail notes the woman's chief affair was first discovered by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who secured pictures of the girl and her minister-paramour, and informed the Conservative prime minister of his cabinet member's involvement.

Another newspaper, the Toronto Telegram said Diefenbaker was "morally outraged" but eventually was convinced the affair involved only sex, not security.

Cardin challenged Diefenbaker to tell the Commons what he knew of the affair.

AFTER BOOK, CURIOUS THINGS BEGAN TO HAPPEN!

Detectives Hounding Auto Safety Critic

WASHINGTON — A few months after the publication of Ralph Nader's critical book on American automobiles, "Unsafe at Any Speed," detective agencies in Washington, Boston and New York began an investigation into his background and habits.

Did he have a normal sex-life? Was he anti-semitic? Did he belong to left-wing political groups? Was he a licensed driver? Was he professionally competent?

Other curious things began happening, according to an article by James Ridgeway in the current issue of The New Republic. Nader was bothered by pointless telephone calls on the eve of his testimony on auto safety before a congressional committee. People began following him.

An attractive brunette solicited his company at a casual meeting in a drug store on Feb. 20. Three days later, he was approached by a blonde in a supermarket who invited him to her apartment to move furniture around.

Investigators questioned his friends, his college professors, and a writer who had reviewed his book. They claimed Nader had applied for a job and they were checking him out. It was a plausible excuse but it was untrue. Nader was not job-hunting.

He was, instead, pursuing his interest in what is wrong with American cars — preparing his testimony for Congress and preparing for a meeting with auto-makers in Detroit.

Was it the auto-makers who had developed this unusual interest in a 32-year-old Connecticut lawyer?

Neither Nader nor reporter Ridgeway could find out.

One investigating firm, Allied Investigative Service of Washington, refused to discuss the matter with Ridgeway initially and then denied it had any interest in Nader.

The Boston detective firm, Management Consultants, brushed off the reporter with: "I am not at liberty to discuss these matters."

The New York firm, Vincent Gillen Associates, of Garden City, admitted asking about Nader for a "client" considering him for an important job, to do research or something.

Gillen told Ridgeway the investigation is incomplete and "all I can say, it is good for Nader."

Nader, however, does not feel good about it.

"They can't hurt me," he said, "asking about my sex life, my drinking habits and things like that. I'm not vulnerable. But it's a strange thing. Suppose I were married and had several children and someone turned up something embarrassing. It would be intimidating for a writer.

"I think it's wrong, if anyone disagrees with my book or what I've had to say, to turn it into something personal like this. Let them debate the issues, instead of this kind of thing."

These days, Ottawa has almost more scandals than y'kin scan.

servative Association in Ottawa Saturday, Diefenbaker stormed that the government had attempted to "blackmail" him into silence.

Diefenbaker vowed to his cheering audience that the government tactics had failed, and that his party will press for a royal commission into all aspects of Canada's security going back to 1944.

NOT INVOLVED

Diefenbaker told the Young Tories that his government had never been involved in anything that could constitute a threat to Canada's security.

He insisted a full inquiry, behind closed doors if necessary, could determine that everything was being done "to meet the challenge of Communist infiltration" through an administration of justice that was "pure and undefiled."

'Ignorant Women' Able to Start War

VANCOUVER (CP)—Women, says Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, would be just as liable as men to push the button of atomic war if they ruled the world.

In a speech to a public affairs conference sponsored by the University of B.C. Alumni Association here Saturday, the former head of the UN Technical Assistance program and now co-chairman of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, said:

"Under the present system of education and distribution of responsibilities, women are more likely than men to be ignorant, unconcerned, prejudiced, indiscriminating and credulous."

He said because of women's limitations in education and restrictions in experience, they are more likely to be reactionary and conservative, and cannot be looked to for enlightened human conduct under the nuclear threat.

He added, however, that the hand that rocks the cradle is not the only one capable of pushing the atomic button. Men, he said, are hell-bent on self-destruction as well.

"It is not at all impossible that we shall end the human story before 1976," he said.

ADDIS ABABA (AP)—The stormiest conference in the three-year life of the Organization of African Unity came to an end Saturday night with a final tally of eight nations staging walkouts and one registering a protest by remaining only as an observer.

OAU's handling of the Rhodesian crisis and the meeting's recognition of a delegation from the new military regime in Ghana brought on the split. After six days of angry debate, charge and countercharge, the foreign ministers' conference finally adopted a resolution

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Blonde Candace Mossler set out today, as she put it, to mother a brood of adored children and to "pick up the pieces" of a $33,000,000 banking and loan business.

She was asked in the presence of her nephew, Melvin Lane Powers, at a press conference following their acquittal Sunday in the 1964 slaying of her multi-millionaire husband: "Mrs. Mossler, will you and Mel Powers be married?"

With a trace of vexation, Mrs. Mossler replied:

"We don't have any intentions in that direction."

Union between aunt and nephew is generally forbidden by U.S. law. Powers is a son of Mrs. Mossler's sister.

Less than three hours earlier, they had been acquitted by an all-male jury of the slaying of her husband, Jacques, 69, who, in the words of the state, was standing in the way of an incestuous love affair between his wife and her nephew.

Mossler died June 30, 1964, of a heavy blow atop the head and 39 stab wounds after screaming: "Don't, don't do that to me." The scene was the Key Biscayne apartment where Mossler lived with his wife and their four adopted children.

Mrs. Mossler, sensitive about her age, places it at 40. Powers, six-foot-three, darkly handsome, is 29.

The jury heard more than 100 witnesses during the seven-

Luong Bui Tung, said a "tough hand" was needed to deal with economic crimes.

The government prosecutor warned that the court's verdicts "will be severe," first in order to punish those guilty of economic crimes and second in order to serve as a warning to those "who are dreaming of making a fortune illegally."

Sentences to be given by the court will range from a minimum of life imprisonment to a maximum of the death penalty, court sources said.

CONFISCATE PROPERTY

Ta Vinh was told that his property would be confiscated by the government. He was given 24 hours in which to request amnesty from Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu, who is also the chairman of the military directorate that runs the country.

Government sources said that if Ta Vinh goes before the firing squad, it may be "composed of women, for psychological purposes."

Ta Vinh was found guilty of attempting to bribe a sergeant in the National Security Service when he became suspicious that security officers were on his trail.

OTHER CHARGES

He also was charged with forcing buyers to pay more than officially set prices for cloth, steel and tin roofing materials and other goods. He was said to have hoarded various goods in order to sell them later at higher prices.

Ta Vinh was acquitted on a fourth charge of illegally transferring money out of the country.

Ta Vinh showed no sign of emotion, except to pass his hand nervously over his face.

But his wife, 31, and children—ranging in age from one to 14—broke into cries of anguish and weeping. Ta Vinh was marched out of the room by soldiers with fixed bayonets.

"Some of our military experts are confident China will not enter the war in Viet Nam. Their confidence would be more reassuring if it did not bring to mind the predictions of military experts in 1950 that China would not enter the Korean War, as well as more recent predictions about an early victory in Viet Nam."

"In fact, it is the view of certain China experts in our government that the Chinese leaders themselves expect to be at war with the United States within a year, and it is clear that some of our own officials also expect a war with China."

Fulbright said the expectation of war often overcomes the desire of both sides to avoid it.

JAKARTA (Reuters)—Some 3,000 slogan chanting, banner-waving school children stormed and occupied Indonesia's education ministry offices here today as anti-government demonstrations continued for the second week.

The students concentrated their attack on Education Minister Sumardjo and eased off on their demands that Foreign Minister Subandrio be brought to trial and hanged.

Bands of demonstrators roamed the streets of the city, chalking slogans on cars and passing out anti-government posters.

Groups of university students defied government orders closing the university here and continued to gather in their classrooms and buildings.

The attack on the education ministry met with no resistance.

Some students boarded trucks and buses and drove around the city shouting anti-government slogans and warnings that Communists are infiltrating the cabinet.

Officials and workers at the electricity ministry joined the students in their anti-government demands Monday and accused the electricity minister of being involved in last year's Communist-led abortive coup attempt against the Sukarno regime.

'No Viet Nam Troops' U.K. House Assured

LONDON (AP)—Britain does not intend to send troops to join American forces in Viet Nam, Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart told the House of Commons today.

Stewart had been asked by Lady Tweedsmuir, a Conservative member of Parliament, whether the U.S. government had asked Britain to send troops to Viet Nam. He did not answer directly but said:

"It is not our intention to do so, in view of our position as co-chairman of the Geneva conference."

accident or by design, at almost any time.

"Some of our military experts are confident China will not enter the war in Viet Nam. Their confidence would be more reassuring if it did not bring to mind the predictions of military experts in 1950 that China would not enter the Korean War, as well as more recent predictions about an early victory in Viet Nam."

"In fact, it is the view of certain China experts in our government that the Chinese leaders themselves expect to be at war with the United States within a year, and it is clear that some of our own officials also expect a war with China."

Fulbright said the expectation of war often overcomes the desire of both sides to avoid it.

The Pussycat

For People Who Are Fed Up With FEEDING TIGERS!

There are lots of ferocious cars around these days. If their names don't take your breath away, their price tag will.

The VOLKSWAGEN is a different kind of car... it's a "Pussycat," sort of a tiger that's been house broken and doesn't even drink water (because it's air cooled). Its rear mounted engine never freezes, and averages 36 M.P.G.

That's our story. Some cars are big on looks and others are built strictly for economy. Then there's the "Pussycat." It's the one car you can choose without making a choice.

British PM Ridiculed

SALISBURY (Reuters)—A Rhodesian toilet paper-manufacturing firm has threatened legal action against persons overprinting its product with a caricature of British Prime Minister Wilson.

An advertisement in Monday's issue of Salisbury's Rhodesia Herald warns that the manufacturer would take legal action against persons adulterating their product.

It says the toilet paper, bearing the caricature of "a well-known political figure," is being circulated throughout Rhodesia.

PORTRAIT NOT NAMED

Although the advertisement does not name the person portrayed by the caricature, the caricature clearly is that of the British prime minister.

Toilet paper produced by other Rhodesian manufacturers is understood to have been treated similarly.

The toilet roll caricatures are the latest in a campaign to ridicule Wilson following the British sanctions imposed on Rhodesia since the white-minority government's seizure of independence from Britain in November.
